Reds' Trial Jury Is Given Recess Until 9:30 Today

Excused by Medina After Failure to Reach Verdict by 10:20 at Night

New York, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A Federal jury late today began deliberating the guilt or innocence of 11 top leaders of the Communist Party in the United States who are charged with conspiracy to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

The history-making case went to a jury of four men and eight women at 3:55 p. m. after a trial that lasted just short of nine months.

However, the jury, not having agreed on a verdict at 10:20 p. m., was excused until 9:30 a. m.

The Communist leaders, members of the party's American "Politburo," faced a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and $10,000 fine each if convicted.

Two-Hour Charge Delivered

The jury filed from the packed courtroom on the first floor of the Federal Court building in Foley Square to begin its deliberations behind locked doors after Judge Harold R. Medina had delivered a two-hour charge, instructing them not to be diverted by issues of "Communism, capitalism or any other 'ism.'"

The question, Medina said, is whether the 11 top party leaders are guilty of conspiring to teach and advocate revolution.

He told the jury it could find all 11 defendants guilty or innocent or it could find one or more guilty and the others not guilty.

Jury Asks for 3 Exhibits

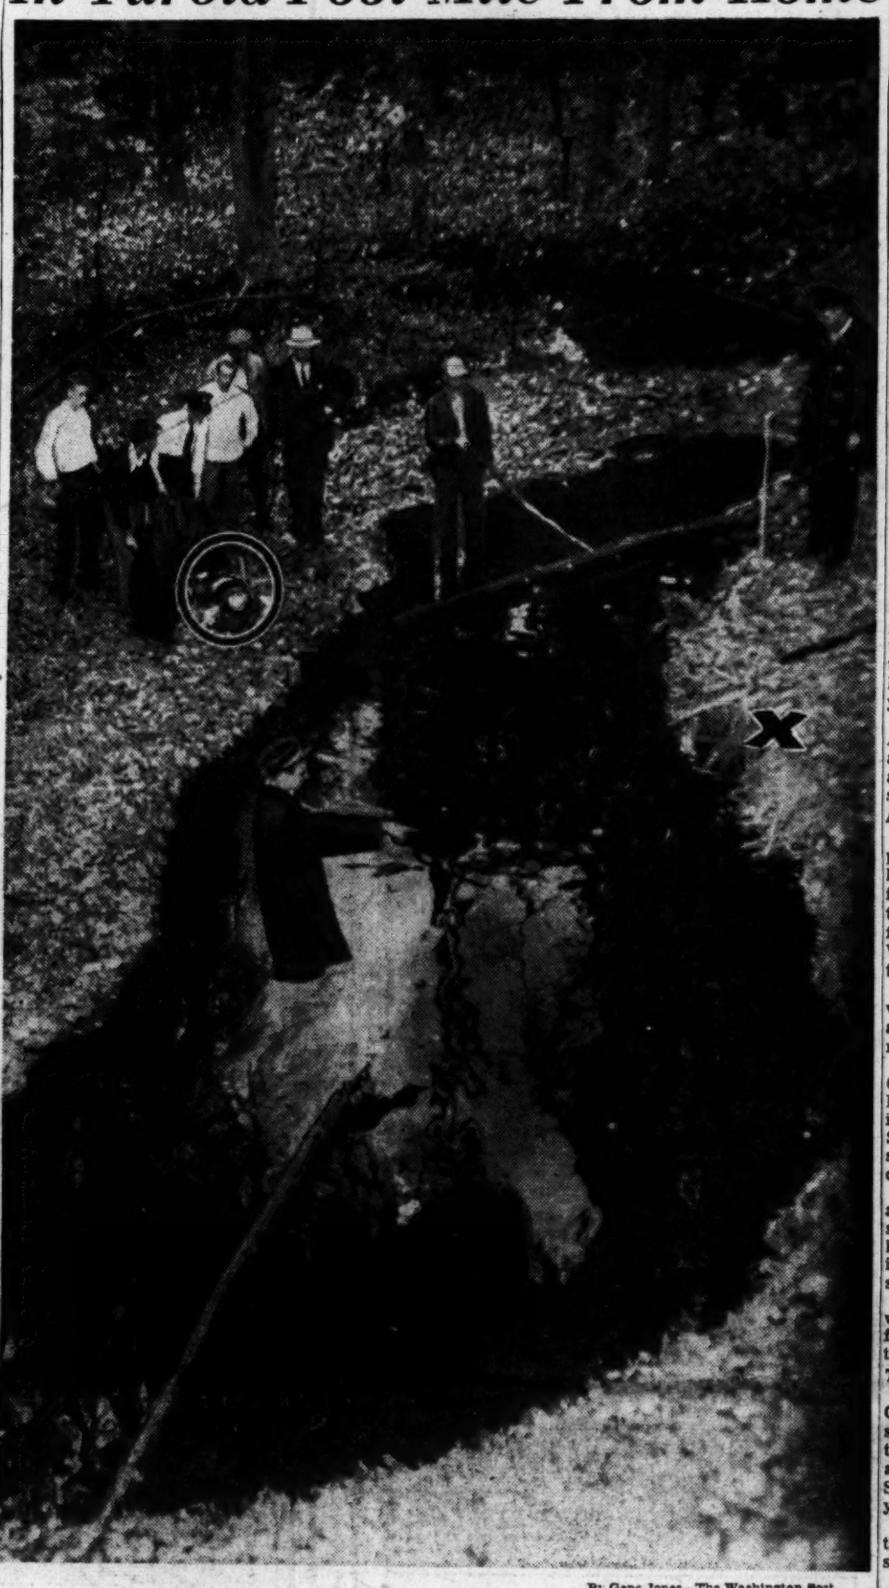
About 45 minutes after it retired, the jury asked for three exhibits introduced as evidence in the trial. They were the program of the Communist International, a study outline from one of the classes conducted by Communist teachers and the book "Strategy and Tactics." A marshal took the exhibits to the jury room.

At 8:30 the judge called attorneys from both sides into his chambers and conferred with them for about an hour.

The jury asked for, and received, another trial exhibit, the book, "Problems of Leninism," by Josef Stalin.

A prosecution witness had testified earlier that the book was used in Communist "schools." In one chapter, Stalin had written that a "dictatorship of the proletariat" could "obviously" not be achieved without a violent revolution.

'Huck Finn' Life of Boy, 6, Ends In Turbid Pool Mile From Home



By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

SEARCH'S END—Lieut. L. A. Kerby, knee-deep in water, points to the bank (x) under which the body (circle) of 6-year-old Otis Mason was found yesterday. The body had been carried under the bank by water current and floated out when sticks were poked under bank

Boy Escapes Death in Fall Of 7 Stories

A 4-year-old boy fell from a seven-story window of his parents' apartment last night, miraculously escaping death although his condition was reported critical.

He is Richard, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Harold Goodman of 1631 S st. nw. The boy's father is an attorney.

Police said the boy fell about 75 feet and landed in a clump of bushes about 4 feet high, breaking his fall.

His parents told police there was a screen on the window and that as an additional precaution they had installed a netting of chicken wire, but that in some manner the lad managed to slip through both.

Officers said the apartment is on the 17th st. side of the building. They said a narrow strip of soil and sod is between the building wall and the sidewalk, where the bushes grow. After crashing through the bushes, they said, the boy landed on the soil, and not on the concrete sidewalk.

He was taken to Children's Hospital in a private ambulance and placed under care of the family physician.

Time of Drowning Is Set by Coroner As Tuesday Night

The Huckleberry Finn life is no more for 6-year-old Otis T. Mason. He is dead.

The body of the blue-eyed, laughing, tow-headed boy, who liked to walk barefoot up dusty roads, climb trees and explore the countryside, was found yesterday in a turbid pool about a mile from his home near Colesville, Md.

Death apparently came swiftly and mercifully to the boy whose disappearance Tuesday afternoon stirred up a search in which police, volunteer firemen, soldiers, Marines, school children and neighbors joined.

By the reckoning of Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, the boy met his death through accidental drowning and his body apparently had been in the water since Tuesday night.

The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy W. Mason of Notley rd., near Colesville. Only 14 months ago his father, a well-to-do plumbing and heating contractor, had acquired the $50,000 estate on Notley rd. so that his son, handicapped because of a thyroid gland affliction, would have greater protection.

The body was found at about 1:25 p. m. beneath the low-hanging bank of the muddy pool, part

Senator Pepper Is Assigned to District Committee

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) yesterday was assigned to membership on the Senate District Committee.

His appointment was approved last night by the Senate. He takes the place of the late Senator Miller (D., Idaho).

Pepper moved into the District Committee by invitation of Chairman Neely (D., W. Va.).

Neely said Pepper "is one of the most capable and industrious members of the Senate and I wanted him on that committee. I don't know of anyone who would be more industrious."

Neely added that he did not recall any time when he and Pepper had been on opposite sides of a major issue.

Stuart Recommended

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday recommended confirmation of Harold C. Stuart, 37-year-old Oklahoma lawyer, to be Assistant Secretary of Air.

Commissioners Back Loan

4000 Low Rent Housing Units Virtually Assured District

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A 4000-unit low rent public housing program for Washington was virtually assured yesterday when the District Commissioners agreed to support a request for a $550,000 loan by the Public Housing Administration.

The loan will be applied for by the National Capital Housing Authority as a preliminary one to cover surveys and planning for the project. Final cost of the buildings has not yet been estimated.

The Public Housing Administration has already indicated approval for the loan and John Ihlder, NCHA executive officer, told a meeting of the agency board of directors yesterday afternoon that he expected the funds to be made available in a week.

In a resolution approving the NCHA loan request, the Commissioners pointed out that there is a "need for such low rent public housing at rents within the means of low income families, especially families of living or deceased veterans and servicemen, which need is not being met by private enterprise."

The resolution said "such a condition constitutes a menace to the health, safety, morals and welfare of the inhabitants of the District of Columbia."

Marriage Wouldn't Work

Shirley Temple Tearfully Says She's Divorcing Agar

"WE TRIED HARD . . ."—Shirley Temple and John Agar, pictured recently admiring their 20-month-old daughter, Linda, are separated. The 21-year-old actress, who 16 years ago soared to stardom in the role of "Little Miss Marker," said yesterday she would seek a divorce

Hollywood, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Shirley Temple, only yesterday the world's favorite baby star in golden curls, said today she's divorcing John Agar "after 2½ years of trying to make our marriage work."

"We both tried hard, we really did. We hoped we would last forever, but it just didn't work," said the dimpled star, now 21.

She was crying as she spoke.

Her wedding four years ago to the handsome former Air Corps sergeant had movie fans counting their gray hairs.

"It ended for private reasons. It's a personal thing between Jack and me and we don't want to talk about it," Shirley said.

'Hill' Row On Air Force In Deadlock

Emergency Money Power for Military Is Voted in Senate; House May Say 'No'

A Senate-House row over the size of the Air Force was deadlocked so tight yesterday that the Senate voted to give the Defense Department emergency spending powers until January 16.

The emergency bill was rushed through the Senate to make sure the Army, Navy and Air Force can meet their payrolls if Congress should adjourn this session without settling the airplane row.

It was reported in advance, however, that the House would turn down the maneuver and insist on a settlement of the airplane issue, once and for all. Tied up in the row is the entire annual appropriation for the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. The bill should have been passed before this fiscal year began July 1.

The dispute is over whether the Air Force shall have 48 groups as advocated by President Truman and the Senate, or 58 groups insisted on by the House.

Approval Reiterated

Mr. Truman reiterated his approval of the pared-down figure at his weekly press conference. Asked for comment on the deadlock, he told reporters that he had informed the Senate conferees Wednesday that he was still for the 48 groups.

The Senate and House have voted overwhelmingly to stand pat and conferees for both sides have refused to budge an inch.

Representative George H. Mahon (D., Tex.) chairman of the House Military Spending Subcommittee, implied that Mr. Truman and the Senate have failed to recognize the significance of Russia's explosion of the A-bomb.

"Though some people cannot readjust their thinking to the Russians' having the atomic bomb," he said, "millions of Americans living in concentrated areas can do so."

He argued that the extra planes voted by the House are necessary for the "continental defense" of the United States.

To Stand on Senate Figure

Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate defense spending subcommittee, was determined to hold out for the Senate figure. He said on behalf of Senate conferees that "they won't yield a penny on anything."

No more joint conferences on the deadlocked defense bill were scheduled immediately

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, said he has no plans for such a time extension as was voted for by the Senate.

Cannon also said he would reject the idea of having the Senate agree to the bigger House figure with the understanding that Mr. Truman would not spend all the money appropriated.

"We naturally expect the executive branch of the Government to cooperate for national defense," Cannon said, "and we see no reason why money for a 58-group force should not be expended when appropriated."

Besides the primary issue of the 400 planes, the conferees still must reach agreement on a Senate move that eliminated $275,000,000 in contract authority for the strategic materials stockpile program.

Adm. Denfeld Charges Campaign to Reduce Navy to Convoy Duty

Operations Chief Startles Hearing By Joining 'Rebel' Attack on Pentagon

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Admiral Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, charged yesterday that backstage Pentagon moves curtailing the Navy have left the country with a "false sense of security."

Department of Defense officials, said Denfeld, are waging a "steady campaign" to reduce the Navy to a mere convoy and antisubmarine force.

What's wrong with unification, he told Congress, is that the Navy has not been admitted to a "full partnership" with the other armed services in high command councils.

The No. 1 Navy man, who had not been expected to line himself up so completely with his "rebel" admirals, startled the hearing with his "fighting" stand.

Offers 6-Point Corrective

Warning that Naval aviation and the Marine Corps "may be put out of business" by what is going on, Denfeld submitted a six-point program to correct the situation.

Following the admiral's testimony, President Truman was asked about the unification row at his news conference. He refused to be drawn into a detailed discussion of the matter, but declared he thought the Nation's present defense policy is adequate and saw no reason for changing it.

When Denfeld finished his slashing attack, there was a thunderous burst of applause from the audience—largely Navy supporters. Committeemen asked him almost no questions, and when the meeting broke, a line of top Navy "brass" formed to congratulate him.

Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews, who opposed the Navy's public "revolt" from the start but who has been sitting with his admirals throughout the hearings, left without any such a public display of support.

Distinct Service, Says Vinson

From Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) and Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.), ranking minority member, however, came warm praise.

"In my judgment, Admiral," said Vinson, "you have rendered a distinct service to your country in putting the chips on the table in this manner."

"I don't know what you had for lunch," Short commented, "but whatever it was, it was the right diet. We appreciate your frankness and courage in stating what had to be said."

In many ways, Denfeld's testimony appeared to carry more weight with the House Armed services committeemen than the earlier statements of such war heroes as Fleet Admirals Chester W. Nimitz, Ernest J. King and William F. (Bull) Halsey.

For Denfeld was talking about

'Filibuster,' Says Lucas

Cain Holds Floor for 4 Hours To Block Change in DP Law

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Charging "filibuster," Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) last night abandoned hopes of a Congressional adjournment Saturday.

Lucas told newsmen he thought Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) had made it clear that he and other opponents of changing the displaced persons law intended to talk at length against it.

"It's a filibuster, of course," said Lucas.

His statement was made after Cain had held the floor more than four hours in a speech against the bill. Cain, who was interrupted frequently for conference reports and other matters, had the floor from 1:35 p. m. to 6:50 p. m.

Lucas insisted, however, that regardless of how long it takes, the Senate will vote on the House-passed bill.

"I think we can pass it all right," Lucas said.

Cain opened with a demand that the bill be sent back to committee —a move which would kill it for this session. Otherwise, warned Cain, the Senate had better be prepared for long consideration of it.

The Republican Senator suggested that the subject of displaced persons legislation could await the return of Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who is in Europe. McCarran, a strong opponent of changes in the present law, is making a personal investigation in Europe of the DP program. McCarran cabled last week that it would be a serious mistake to adopt the House bill, and obtained permission to extend his stay for another three weeks.

The measure, passed by the House several months ago, would raise the number of DP's to be admitted to this country from 205,000 in two years to 339,000 in three. It would also revise the present law to eliminate what President Truman has termed anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic

Reds Smash To Suburbs Of Canton

Last of Nationalist Officials Flown Out; Looting Reported

Hongkong (Friday), Oct. 14 (U.P.). Communist vanguards have reached the suburbs of Canton, a telephone report from the city said early today.

The last Nationalist government officials had abandoned the city by plane Thursday.

The telephone message said some looting had broken out in the city but that most of the Cantonese stayed indoors behind barricaded doors, awaiting the Red army's entry.

The Communists' exact distance from the city proper was uncertain but was believed to be between 3 and 6 miles.

(The Associated Press reported Chinese Communist troops have seized Canton's civilian airport, seven miles northeast of the city. Eight Chinese air lines planes were said to have been caught on the field, which is "White Cloud" airport.)

The government, before fleeing, put the final defenses in the hands of Gen. Yu Ham-mou. It was his job in 1938 to turn Canton over to the Japanese without firing a shot.

One of the last high officials to leave was garrison Comdr. Gen. Li Chi-lan who took off at about 10 p. m. Thursday.

Acting President Li Tsung-jen left earlier in the day. Before fleeing he announced that the Chinese Nationalist government will function from the new "cocapital" of Chungking as of Saturday.

By cocapital he presumably meant there would be some government action at Taipeh, Formosa, where Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek already had taken refuge. There were hints Li might set up his personal headquarters in Kweilin, capital of his native Kwangsi province, midway between Canton and Chungking.

Flies Off Without Yen

All airlines into Canton ceased operation and the Canton airport radio quit operating at 5 p. m.

Premier Yen Hsi-shan was in Formosa, visiting Chiang. He was expected back in Canton, but the cabinet, after waiting for him for two days, flew off without him.

Before the government fled—for the second time since the Communists began sweeping down from the north more than a year ago—Li proclaimed that Canton and South

Violent Turn Feared in Tito Feud

By Frank Gervasi
Staff Correspondent

Belgrade, Oct. 12. — Another crisis in Russo-Yugoslav relations, one of several since Marshal Tito was let out of the Cominform as a heretic 16 months ago, has come and gone. But no one here, least of all Tito himself, believed tonight that it would be the last.

There was, instead, growing awareness that the ideological feud between Tito and his former mentor, Marshal Stalin, might develop any moment into a full blown Yugoslav struggle for political independence and territorial integrity with obvious dangers to the peace of Europe and the world.

Representative Yugoslavs, from government officials to plain clerks, are convinced that the overthrowing of Tito's regime and establishment in its stead of one more amenable to Kremlin dictates has become an axiom of Soviet policy.

Having failed to achieve its objectives by political, propagandistic and economic pressure, and by some of the most virtuous saber rattling heard in Europe since Hitler's heyday, the Yugoslavs reason that the Soviet Union is bound to switch to more violent methods.

They foresee widespread sabotage efforts, guerilla raids, border incidents and even outright invasion as distinct possibilities in the weeks and months ahead. These possibilities will bring the Western powers, particularly the United States, face to face with the necessity of deciding what military policy to pursue should these actions materialize.

"What will America do if we are attacked or if the Soviets try to turn this country into another

Gervasi Finds Few Signs Of Yugoslav Police State

Despite Evidence

Mother Won't Give Up Belief Orphan Is Her Kidnaped Son

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A mother's hope she had found her son, kidnaped from his crib five years ago, dimmed tonight.

A State child-placement official expressed "grave doubt" that orphan Tommy O'Neill was the missing Ronnie Thompson taken from his Ohio home by a red-haired nursemaid.

Dr. Claude F. Ramsay, head of the Michigan Children's Institute, said still-incomplete scientific tests to attempt to determine whether blue-eyed Tommy is the Thompson boy showed "nothing conclusive."

He said a blood test would be completed "sometime tomorrow."

Ronnie was spirited from his grandparents' home at Dayton, Ohio, in October, 1944, by the newly hired nursemaid while his father, Arthur Thompson, was in the armed forces overseas. No conclusive clews to his disappearance ever were uncovered.

"There are grave doubts that Tommy is the Thompson boy," Dr. Ramsay said, "no matter how much we'd like to believe it."

But Mrs. Anna Thompson, mother of the child abducted when he was 20 months old, clung tenaciously to her belief Tommy is her son.

Michigan State police were checking Ronnie's smudged baby footprint against a print taken from the O'Neill boy yesterday at

Mme. Pandit Gets 'Stag' Rating, Is Host to Brother

Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, has been voted "stag" by the protocol division of the State Department. In her new role, she played "host" last evening at a stag dinner for her brother, Prime Minister Nehru of India, with only men as guests.

Covers were laid for 14, and dinner was at the Embassy at 8 o'clock. The dining room was decorated in silver and white and around the drawing room were placed large bunches of orange dahlias.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn were among the guests. Others were Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Ambassador at Large Philip Jessup, Undersecretary of State James E. Webb, Deputy Undersecretary of State Dean Rusk, Assistant Secretary of State George McGhee, American Ambassador to India Loy Henderson, Sir Girja Bajpai, Indian Secretary General for External Affairs, Sir Chintaman Deshmuk, Minister of India B. R. Sen., and B. K. Nehru, Financial Counsellor of India.

Mme. Pandit was voted "stag" just before her brother's arrival in Washington. During the recent monetary conference, the Indian ambassador did not attend state functions but was listed as a guest for parties attend by wives of foreign dignitaries.

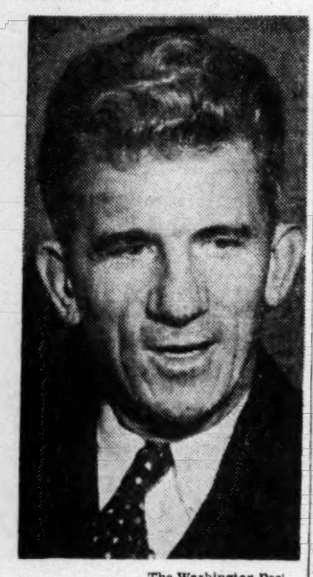
Howley Hits Soviet Cold War Tactics

General Blisters Red Cold War



The Washington Post
GEN. FRANK L. HOWLEY
". . . They've got a bum system"

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Communist Russia is so busy "fighting dirty" she is not producing enough consumer goods, Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley declared yesterday in a blistering attack on the country's cold war tactics.

The square-jawed Philadelphian who jousted with the Russians for four years as American commandant of Berlin said:

"Our system is showing them up badly; they've got a bum system and we're not going to get out of their way. The United States is her stumbling block. That's where the clash comes."

Howley, back in civilian clothes, spoke at the Statler Hotel before the sixteenth annual meeting of the National Association of Food Chains, here for a four-day conference ending Saturday night.

No Compromise in Quest

"There is no compromise in Russia's quest for world economic and political domination," said Howley. "They are staking everything on what they call 'dialectic materialism,' in other words, the cold, brutal atmosphere they create everywhere they operate."

The idea that Russia will "fall on her own face" with so much territory in her grasp is mere wishful thinking, said Howley.

"That would be like my getting in the ring with Joe Louis with the idea of letting him tire himself by punching me."

The former Berlin commander said he saw little use in making an agreement with Russia unless the United States has the ability to enforce it.

He did, however, hold high hopes for the birth of democratic processes in the western sector of Berlin.

"The government up to now seems to be acting very democratically and the people are behind their elected representatives," he commented.

In the morning session, Franklin J. Lunding, president of Jewel Tea Co., Chicago, warned against mounting "subsidies geared to avoid failure on the part of everyone."

"It is my personal feeling," he said, "that supports that will prevent a complete demoralization in market prices for farm products will be in the public interest, provided they leave room for typical American initiative."

Adrian O'Keeffe, president of the First National Stores, expressed concern at the recent government anti-trust action against the A. & P. food chain.

"Regardless of what some would have you believe, there is no monopoly in low-cost food distribution," said O'Keefe.

The more than 1000 chain store executives conducted further day-long panel discussions yesterday in which merchandising ideas were swapped.

Some of the trends chain store shoppers may look for include:

1. More self-service prepackaged meat counters.

2. A larger variety of fruits and vegetable, prewashed and wrapped in cellophane. The trade maintains wrapping has cut down spoilage by 40 percent.

3. Grocery stores that carry a line of drugs, essential household hardware items such as hammers and screwdrivers, prepared sandwiches and a bigger line of cooked meats and poultry.

Joseph Bildner, operator of King's Super Markets in Elizabeth, N. J., stressed the importance of dynamic advertising that has "a news impact."

He got a big laugh when he told his colleagues how his advertising department recently came up with an idea of a "fire sale."

"I approved the stunt, but while carrying the ad copy to the newspaper office, the ad boys started a fire in one of my stores to back up the ad," Bildner said. "They burned up 2 pounds of coffee."

Jack Logan and Jac Lehrman—both Washington men—are president of the association and reception committee chairman, respectively.

Chain Finds Little Profit In Red Zone

There's not much profit operating a grocery store behind the iron curtain, according to two Dutchmen who should know.

The brothers, Paul and Dr. G. J. M. deGruyter, directors of the largest food chain in Holland, also operate by remote control about 50 stores in the Russian zone of Germany.

They are in Washington attending the National Association of Food Chains meeting at the Statler Hotel.

"The profit we make in our stores in Germany is hardly enough to cover expenses, the deGruyters commented cautiously.

They explained that their purchasing and selling prices are fixed by the Soviet government. All produce is procured from government warehouses upon presentation of customers' coupons, they said.

In The Netherlands, shoppers still face price control and rationing on coffee, rice, meat, cheese and textile goods.

The deGruyter brothers are greatly impressed with the "revolution in methods of retailing groceries in America."

They believe pre-packaging and self-service stores will eventually be a standard thing in Europe—when they have a wider variety of produce to sell and when cellophane is off the shortage list.

Holland, a large dairy country, has had its oleomargarine-butter squabble, too.

"All of our oleo is colored, but there is no tax on it," said Paul. "But our experience has showed us that sale of oleo has had little noticeable effect on the butter industry since the latter product has become primarily an export item."

40,000 Visit Shirlington

An estimated 40,000 persons helped the Shirlington Shopping Center celebrate the third day of its fifth anniversary week yesterday.

Milton Elsberg, president of the Shirlington Business Men's Association, said about 20,000 cars were checked into parking areas around the center, the biggest day to date.

The 48 stores, celebrating five successful years, are featuring price-slashing sales during the October 10-15 period, a style show, plus an eye-catching array of gifts, including a new 1949 Ford.

The establishments were open until 9 o'clock last night, and will be open until 9 tonight.

The crowds have overshot even the rosiest precelebration estimates, Elsberg said.

He pointed out that 50,000 coupons were originally printed for drawings for gifts. This supply was exhausted the first day, he said, and since then 200,000 more have been printed.

All stores have put on extra help, Elsberg said. At that, they are still being overwhelmed by the responses, and the biggest shopping days are expected Friday and Saturday, he said.

Shirlington Shopping Center is situated almost on the Alexandria-Arlington line, just a stone's throw from where these two counties merge with Fairfax County. They are flanked by two of Greater Washington's largest apartment developments, Parkfairfax and Fairlington.

The center was the inspiration of the automobile dealer, Joseph Cherner. He talked the tract owners into forming the Shirlington corporation in August, 1943.

SHE GETS THERE EARLY—Selecting food is simpler if you do it early in the week, surer if you make a real study of all the good things displayed in open cases at the modern grocery. Mrs. Kay Bartos illustrates the point by selecting packaged meat from one of the ultra new refrigerator cases on display at the National Association of Food Chains meeting at Hotel Statler

Thanksgiving Turkeys Will Be Cheaper

Turkeys are going to be cheaper this Thanksgiving, according to W. D. Termohlen, director of the Department of Agriculture poultry branch. He spoke yesterday before the Maryland Turkey Producers' Association at Annapolis.

"Housewives will get turkey at about the same price as in 1946 and 1947," Termohlen said.

Prices varied greatly then, Termohlen said, but the national average was somewhere between 57 and 59 cents a pound. "There wasn't enough on hand last year," he said. "Prices were too high."

Meanwhile, retail fresh fruit and vegetable prices continued to slide this week in Washington area stores as the unseasonably warm weather brought generally plentiful supplies to the markets.

Some stores again reduced prices of certain cuts of pork, but otherwise meats will cost about the same as last weekend, retailers said.

A spokesman for one large chain which this week continued to cut pork prices, particularly fresh ham, said the pork market had not hit bottom yet. A large spring pig crop, now beginning to come in, is expected to increase this fall's supply by 45 percent over last year, the American Meat Institute estimated.

Eggs continued plentiful, dealers reported, with one retailer rating medium size grade As at 60 or 61 cents a dozen as a "good buy" along with hams. Poultry prices were about the same as last week, and steaks were advertised at 79 cents a pound, unchanged generally.

Cauliflower and tomatoes are "the cheapest in a long time," one retailer said. Apples, while plentiful and cheap, are coming in without much color because of the warm weather, dealers said. While the lack of color does not impair their quality, it shows down sales, they reported.

Shop Early In Week, Best Grocer's Tip

By Lucia Brown

Do your shopping early—in the week!

That's about the best advice your friend, the grocer, can give you, say representatives of the big food chains now attending the National Association meeting at Hotel Statler.

Shopping is so much easier on the housewife Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, when the store isn't crowded, points out Rilea W. Doe, vice president of Safeway Stores. Prices are just as good and the food just as fresh.

Many stores get 65 to 70 percent of all their business on weekends, says George L. Moore, of First National Stores. That explains the air of peace and calm early in the week.

"If you have the refrigerator space and the time to do your shopping then," he says, "you'll find it saves your nerves and money and improves your menus. There is less waiting and you have a better chance of making a good selection."

Get acquainted with your grocer, too. That's a tip from T. J. Conway, president of Fisher Brothers Co. which operates 183 food stores in Ohio.

The self-service trend notwithstanding, it's a fine idea for steady customers to make themselves known to the department heads in the grocery, believes Mr. Conway. It's one thing a big store misses, he says—the direct contact with customers who can let their wants and wishes be known to the management.

2 Big Ranches' Profits Go to Charity Fund

Omaha, Oct. 13 (AP)—Profits from operation of two mammoth ranches recently purchased by Nebraska corporations headed by an Omaha attorney will go to a religious foundation, records in the office of the Douglas County clerk disclosed today.

The properties are a 35,000-acre cotton ranch in the San Joaquin Valley of California, formerly owned by a firm headed by Russell Giffin, and the famous Tom Campbell wheat ranch in Montana, a 65,000-acre tract at the foot of the Bighorn Mountains.

Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews of Omaha is listed as one of the trustees of the religious foundation.

Gordon Diesing, Omaha attorney, recently announced that Rancho San Bernardo, Inc., of which he is head, has acquired title to the $4,800,000 cotton ranch; and the United States Wheat Corporation, which he also heads, has acquired the two-million-dollar Montana wheat ranch.

He said both Giffin and Campbell would remain as managers of the respective properties.

The county clerk's records list both purchasing corporations as charitable organizations, whose profits after costs of operation and administration go to the Sacred Heart Foundation Fund, Inc., another Omaha corporation founded by Diesing.

The stated purpose of the foundation is to give financial aid to various Catholic religious causes.

Diesing declined comment on the charitable project other than to term it an "investment trust." He said he had "no statement whatsoever" to make.

In Washington, the wheat ranch purchase brought comment on the floor of the House.

'Want Ad' Lures Dozen To Join Guard

Cincinnati, Oct. 13 (U.P.)—The Ohio National Guard today defended its "men wanted" advertisement that lured 150 men to headquarters of a guard unit last night.

Many of the applicants were indignant when they discovered the advertisement which drew them to the Ridgewood Forge Co., plant in search of jobs was a recruiting device of a guard battalion. The unit's armory occupies part of the plant.

Lieut. Col. William Walker Johnson, battalion commander, took full responsibility for the ad in a morning newspaper that called for 60 men, 17 to 35, for part-time work at $1.25 an hour and up. Colonel Johnson justified the pay rate by the fact that recruits who attend the two-hour drill period, once weekly, are paid $2.50.

He said the ad was part of the National Guard recruiting program, "Operation Fill-Up."

Last night's operation, Colonel Johnson said, netted 12 recruits.

5-10 Pct. Decline Reported In Enrollments at Colleges

Cincinnati, Oct. 13 (AP).—A decline of 5 to 10 percent in enrollment in most colleges and universities, except teachers colleges, was reported here today.

The report came from Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati, who reported on 471 colleges and universities.

"Chief cause of the decline," he said, "is the decrease, ranging from 15 to 35 percent, in GI students who receive Veterans' Administration grants for tuition fees and living expenses."

Another cause, he said, was the smaller number of 1949 high school groduates, the result of a low birth rate in 1930.

Two of every three teachers colleges reported increased in enrollment over 1948 ranging from 5 to 25 percent.

Among State universities reporting full-time enrollments, the largest were: University of California, 43,359 total students (16,438 veteran students); University of Illinois, 23,179 (10,438 veterans); Ohio State University, 22,500 students (9000 veterans); University of Michigan, 21,400 (9400 veterans); University of Wisconsin, 17,690 (7900 veterans); University of Texas, 15,600 (6701 veterans).

Full-time enrollments in other representative universities: Brown, 4370 (1362 veterans); Chicago, 7700 (3381 veterans); Cornell, 10,000 (4300 veterans); Dartmouth, 2932 (825 veterans); Duke, 5300 (veterans fewer than 200); John Hopkins, 2560 (1100 veterans); Notre Dame, 4820 (about 1700 veterans); Yale, 8519 (3028 veterans).

Air Traffic Cops to Study 'Bad' Words

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Reporter

The traffic cops for this Nation's airplanes are going to learn all about bad words.

Not the bad words that are bad because they are naughty—they're going to learn about the words that are bad because they are hard to hear clearly.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, in announcing this yesterday, said the need for such a study is obvious.

Millions of words are radioed each day from CAA airport traffic control towers to pilots flying throughout this country and over the oceans.

It's extremely important, the CAA said, that these words be easily understood.

Then the CAA's psychology branch, headed by Malcolm McCormick, will try to find which of these are the hardest to understand. If they're downright awful, substitutes will be found.

During the war, the CAA pointed out, similar studies were made on words, particularly those which were possible code words.

I thought maybe you'd like to know what words are easy to understand and what aren't, so I checked on some of the wartime tests.

These show that "greyhound" is easy to understand but not "setter."

"Porcupine" is fine, "sheep" isn't.

"Whippoorwill" but not "goose."

"Woodpecker" but not "thrush."

"Mandolin" but not "tenor."

Scorn the dandelion if you will, but it's a better word than "lotus."

The office wolf raised a howl, but according to the word study, there's no questioning this:

"Cornell" is good; "Vassar" is bad.

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission may turn the tables on the doctors by asking them to be the guinea pigs in a color television test.

The idea was projected yesterday when FCC was notified that color television broadcasts of operating room techniques are on the program for the American College of Surgeons' convention in Chicago next week. This professional audience may be polled on what it thinks of color broadcasting.

The experimental equipment to be used is owned and operated as "institutional promotion" by Smith, Kline & French Laboratory, Philadelphia makers of pharmaceuticals. It was previously shown in Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Denver, Baltimore and Washington and involves locating a color camera above an operating table, with restricted medical audiences viewing the procedure in detail on color receivers across the city.

J. N. Du Barry, company executive, testified before FCC about an enthusiastic response by medical men and predicted that all medical schools eventually will use this plan for student instruction. He emphasized his company has no connection with the broadcasting industry.

Commissioner Robert F. Jones commented that this was interesting as reflecting an individual opinion, but that what FCC wanted was a large, direct cross-section of reaction to color on the video screen, from non-radio sources, to determine whether the public wants color now.

He suggested the commission prepare a brief questionnaire to be handed the doctors at the Chicago session and then sent back to FCC for study.

Du Barry testified the Smith, Kline & French equipment includes 20 hand-tooled color receivers, built on specifications supplied by Columbia Broadcasting System, and that his company was wholly pleased with the investment.

In response to a question by Columbia counsel Samuel Rosenman, Du Barry asserted that color fidelity observed in the Radio Corp. of America demonstration here last Monday did not come up to "what we get out of our Columbia equipment."

FCC, which has officially viewed both the CBS and RCA systems, said yesterday it will go to San Francisco the week of November 28 to see a third distinct system to be demonstrated there by Color Television, Inc., of California.

The announcement disclosed that the color hearings will run into December, and that meanwhile the questions of new television channels, their allocations and the matter of lifting the year-old freeze on new video station grants will have to mark time.

Witnesses at the hearings yesterday included Dr. Charles W. Geer, physicist at the University of Southern California, who described a new-type color television tube he has just patented. He said it was intended to provide low-cost conversion of present black-and-white sets and cheaper color sets. It could be used, he said, regardless of what color system the commission may decide to license.

Columbia closed its case on that testimony.

Huddle Gives Up Two U. S. Career Posts

J. Klahr Huddle resigned yesterday as Ambassador to Burma and United States representative on the United Nations commission for India and Pakistan. The effective date is to be fixed later.

The White House made public a letter from President Truman to Huddle accepting the resignation with "regret." The letter spoke of Huddle's "personal and health reasons" and intended retirement from the foreign service.

Huddle, 58, is a career officer. He is a native of Bettsville, Ohio.

Excommunicated Bride . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

AFTER CATHOLIC WEDDING—This bride of Monday was excommunicated from the Catholic Church yesterday. She is Mrs. Ivan Obolensky, the former Claire McGinnis of San Francisco, pictured with her husband after their marriage in St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York. Later they were also married in the Russian Orthodox Cathedral

Couple Find Hope of Twins Is Quadruplets

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 13 (AP).—Quadruplets were born today to a surprised couple who had expected only twins.

Mrs. Oswald C. Hargreaves, wife of a Canadian war veteran, could only comment "I never expected this" as her four tiny, but healthy daughters were taken to an incubator.

The girls, averaging about 3½ pounds each, were born three weeks prematurely, but Dr. John MacDonald said the delivery at the hospital was just about normal.

Hargreaves, an employe of the Great Lakes Power Co., said:

"We did expect twins and had prepared for them, but we didn't have clothing for four little girls. However, we are tickled pink. It's wonderful."

Dr. MacDonald said he had been certain it would be a multiple birth, "but I never expected four."

"The babies and the mother are doing fine, and so far as I can judge have an excellent chance of survival," he said.

Catholics Oust Bride of Astor Heir for Rites

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Claire McGinnis Obolensky, married Monday to Ivan Obolensky, an Astor heir, was declared excommunicated from the Catholic Church today for a second wedding ceremony in the Russian Orthodox Church.

The Roman ceremony was followed by the Orthodox wedding to satisfy Obolensky's family.

Mrs. Obolensky is the daughter of Mrs. Felix X. McGinnis of San Francisco. Her husband is the son of the former Alice Muriel Astor, daughter of the late Col. John Jacob Astor, and Col. Serge Obolensky.

The announcement by the Catholic archdiocese said:

"Before this marriage was arranged at St. Patrick's Cathedral, both parties solemnly promised in writing that there would be only the Catholic ceremony.

"Both therefore, violated a solemn promise in having the second ceremony, and the Catholic party automatically incurred excommunication by this action."

Obolensky is a writer and a Yale graduate. His father was a Russian prince who dropped his title and became an American citizen. Colonel Obolensky manages the Sherry Netherland hotel here.

Thomas fractured his thigh several weeks ago in Tibet.

Thomas plans to fly to New York Saturday night, arriving Sunday.

Gross Confirmed As Deputy to Austin in U. N.

The Senate last night confirmed the nominations of Ernest A. Gross to be a $20,000-a-year deputy U. S. representative at the United Nations, and Jack K. McFall to replace Gross as Assistant Secretary of State for congressional liaison.

Gross was appointed by President Truman to serve as deputy to Warren R. Austin, chief U. S. spokesman at the U. N., shortly after Congress approved legislation providing for the post. He will hold the rank of ambassador.

The Senate confirmed the appointment of John C. Ross to be a deputy to Austin for work on the U. N. Security Council. He will receive $12,000 yearly.

Gen. Lucero New Army Minister in Argentine

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Gen. Franklin Lucero, former Argentine Military Attache in Washington, was appointed Minister of the Army tonight, succeeding Gen. Humberto Sosa Molina.

Sosa Molina will continue as Minister of Defense.

Teen Troubles Are Sequel to Movie on Sex

Devizes, England, Oct. 13 (AP).—The sex life of teen-agers in Wootton Rivers—a village described in court as having "nothing whatever in the way of diversions"—was laid bare before a bewigged judge today.

The birth of a baby to a girl in the neighborhood shook the community of 275 people and gave rise to an investigation.

Three youths were haled before Justice Sir Laurence Austin Byrne as a result but, said prosecutor Cyril Williams, "It was found that 19 or 20 young people were concerned in matters of impropriety."

All this had been going on for five years or so, since a movie on sex instruction was shown in the village school, the prosecutor added. Impromptu field trips to farms "to watch the behavior of the animals, particularly with regard to their behavior when mating" followed, said G. Hope Scott, defending counsel.

Then the boys and girls began to discover things about themselves.

"It seems that sexual exploratory conduct was occurring among the young people of the village," said Harold Rees, probation officer.

The three boys, all 17, pleaded guilty of improper relations with village girls.

Justice Byrne bound them over on probation for three years.

"It does appear," he said, "that the girls in question were all not only consenting parties, but quite anxious partners, in what was done."

Pajamas Split And Margie's Back Where She Started

Baltimore, Oct. 13 (AP).—Margie Hart isn't in burlesque any more—but she has a good ear for the old, familiar audience reaction.

Margie is now appearing in the legitimate drama, "Light Up The Sky," at Ford's Theater.

One of her costumes is a pair of black velvet pajamas. Last night, that old reaction came suddenly from the other side of the footlights when she turned her back.

Margie whirled quickly, placed a bolero around her hips and sidled to a window seat. She finished the scene facing the audience.

Now, Margie's thinking strongly about buying sturdier pajamas—ones that won't split down the back.

On Patients

Witchcraft In Hospital Is Charged

Eldridge, Calif., Oct. 13 (AP).—A hearing opened today to determine if a former employe tried to upset patients in the Sonoma State Home with talk about witchcraft.

An attractive, 35-year-old woman, dismissed as an employe at the home for the feeble-minded, is trying to clear her name. She is Mrs. Lorena Blackwell, whose dismissal notice accussed her of threatening to put a "curse" on some of the patients and of delving in witchcraft.

Dr. Marshall E. Porter, superintendent of the home, who dismissed her, said she had disturbed the patients in the psychopathic ward with talk of signs of the moon, by grabbing them in the dark and by talk of witchcraft.

Four employes signed a statement complaining particularly of Mrs. Blackwell's talk of signs of the moon, Dr. Porter said. Six patients were to testify.

Mickey Cohen Hands 4 Aides To Police and Suggests Jail

Los Angeles, Oct. 13 (U.P.)—Mickey Cohen today turned four of his lieutenants over to police so they would not be killed or disappear.

Cohen, gambling czar of Los Angeles, told Superior Judge Robert L. Ambrose that two of his "boys" were missing and two were killed in the last year and he didn't want to lose the remaining four. He suggested jail would be a safe place for them.

The judge agreed to cancel $150,000 worth of bonds on the four men—Jimmy Rist, Lou Schwartz, Harold (Happy) Meltzer and Eli Lubin—awaiting trial with Cohen on an assault charge.

Cohen came into court just 24 hours after one of his followers, David Ogul, vanished.

Another Cohen follower, Frank Niccoli, disappeared September 2.

Cohen is under $100,000 bond on charges of conspiring to assault a radio repairman, Alfred M. Pearson. He made no move to turn himself in and go to jail.

Radio Singer Sentenced

Bismarck, N. Dak., Oct. 13 (AP).—Rolan Davison, 41, former Tyler, Tex., radio singer, convicted of transporting his teen-age wife across State lines for immoral purposes, was sentenced to five years in a Federal prison.

$129 Million Mail Bill Hike For U. S. Urged

By The Associated Press

An addition of approximately 129 million dollars to the Nation's mail bill was recommended yesterday by the House Postoffice Committee.

This is about half the amount asked by Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson to meet part of an annual deficit. Postoffice operations currently are running about half a billion dollars a year in the red.

The committee approved only about 10 percent of the increase asked on newspaper and magazine mailing rates. It slapped the heaviest charges against the penny postcard and parcel post.

The total increases approved by the committee in each postal class are:

Second class (publications), $13,500,000. Postoffice Department had asked a total of 125 million dollars.

Post cards, approximately 36 million dollars, with the penny post card upped from 1 to 2 cents.

Third class, approximately 23 million dollars. The principal increase would come from a hike in bulk mailing charges from 1 to 1½ cents a pound.

Fourth class (parcel post), approximately 40 million dollars. Parcel post packages would be increased about 5 cents each, with most of the increase appled to the first pound.

Much of the additional parcel revenue would come from cutting maximum poundage from 70 to 40 pounds in the first and second zones, and to 20 pounds for the remaining zones. Size of packages also would be reduced from the present 100 inches to 72 inches of combined length and girth.

Book mailing rates remained unchanged.

Special services, approximately 15 million dollars. Special delivery charges would go up five cents, with other small boosts applied to charges on registered and insured mail, COD, and postal notes. Money order charges were untouched.

Lewis Offers Plans To End Coal Strike

mines by the Federal Government.

A few hours later President Truman, at a press conference, stated in positive terms he had no intention of seizing the coal mines, certainly not for the time being. Fact is, the President said, he didn't know whether or not he had the power to seize them at all.

A similar negative—but vigorous—reaction was forthcoming from the Southern Coal Producers Association apropos to the granting of new miners' benefits amounting to 30-35 cents extra per ton of coal.

"I think Lewis just picked that figure off the wall as he went by," commented Joseph E. Moody, spokesman for the Southern mine owners, who has been discussing a new contract at Charleston, W. Va., with aides of the United Mine Workers' president.

At White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where representatives of the Northern, Western and "captive" (owned by steel mills) mines have been holding collective bargaining talks with Lewis himself, the first reaction of the operators was one of stony silence.

However, in view of the stand by these operators that they will not yield to Lewis on further demands, but will continue to insist on the old wage-hour contract, together with certain improvements as they see them, it's obvious Lewis will find little encouragement from any of the producers.

This seems especially so since Lewis would take the additional 30 to 35 cents a ton from the profits of mine owners, rather than from the pockets of coal consumers.

'Make-Believe Affair'

Lewis talked to reporters at White Sulphur Springs for 75 minutes yesterday, but failed to detail just exactly what he — and the UMW — wants in the way of higher wages, shorter hours and increased welfare benefits. He would reveal his hand, Lewis said, only when the operators showed a willingness to improve the old contract.

Should the strike, which began September 19, fail to be settled by the disputants, the miners would return to the soft coal pits if the Government were to seize the mines, Lewis said.

"If the situation gets bad enough so the Government thinks it has to do something, then let them seize the mines rather than use the power of Government to enjoin the mine workers," Lewis said.

Lewis thereby for the nth time voiced his deep dislike for the Taft-Hartley Act, which permits an 80-day injunction against "national emergency" strikes.

Any seizure should be "bona fide," Lewis said, whereby the Government action would be for the "account of the people" and not for the profit of the mine owners. Past seizures, Lewis contended, have been "papier-mache and make-believe affairs," with the Government running the mines by telegram and the private owners pocketing the profits. Furthermore, he added, he is opposed to nationalization of the mines.

Right Called Inherent

Asked about Lewis' suggestion yesterday, Mr. Truman said he did not intend to seize the mines; that it was anybody's guess how long the strike would have to last before it would endanger the Nation's health and safety; that he would investigate his power to seize the mines if and when it became necessary to do so.

During the past year's congressional argument over the Taft-Hartley Act, Administration spokesmen claimed for the President the "inherent" constitutional right to end strikes through injunction in the interests of national health and safety. Similar arguments have been made on behalf of the President's seizure powers.

In the past, the coal mines have been seized by the President through authority granted by specific laws, such as the wartime powers.

Having suggested two ways of ending the soft coal walkout, Lewis emphasized that he and the miners were against Government intervention of any sort.

"We are willing to fight this one out," Lewis said. "The mine workers can whip these operators, rich and powerful as they are, and they are willing to do it. We ask no aid. We prefer to be left alone, but if we are not left alone to defeat them on their own ground, then we ask for fair treatment."

"Utterly Futile"

The UMW leader said he wanted nothing to do with fact-finding boards, such as the one the President called into the steel dispute. He said he thoroughly agreed with AFL President William Green who last week opposed fixing of wage rates or working conditions by such boards.

Lewis insisted he wants no part of Federal intervention, not even conciliation and mediation. He described last week's coal conciliation talks here as "abortive, inconsequential and utterly futile."

A word of sympathy for the 500,000 steel strikers who are seeking noncontri' utory welfare benefits, was expressed by Lewis. He said the CIO Steelworkers were making "modest demands and they are entitled to them."

This was something of a change of attitude by Lewis. Last week a UMW Journal editorial rapped the "scared" leadership and policies of the Steelworkers.

Their Kidnaped Child . . .?

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MOTHER SAYS YES—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thompson of Dayton, Ohio, embrace William "Tommy" O'Neill, 6, a ward of the State of Michigan, after arriving yesterday in Hastings to determine whether the lad is their son, Ronald, kidnaped 5 years ago. The mother says it is her child. The State is uncertain

Mother Clings To Her Hope

the western Michigan home where he had boarded for two years.

Mrs. Thompson said she was "absolutely certain" after talking with Tommy that he was her kidnaped son.

Tommy has blue eyes: So did Ronnie; the waif has an indented or "pinched" ear just as the Thompson youngster did. Both had two webbed toes on their right feet. Tommy bears considerable resemblance to Ronnie's father around the eyes.

The O'Neill boy's background, Dr. Ramsay said, makes it extremely unlikely he could be the kidnaping victim.

Dr. Ramsay explained institute records indicate Tommy was given to a Mexican family at Lansing, Mich., by the sister of an unwed Toledo, Ohio, mother. She had a birth certificate showing he was born in January, 1943.

Although the youngsters would be about the same age, the Mexican familys' account indicated the baby was given to them when he was only 10 days old—nearly two years before Ronnie was kidnaped.

The Thompson kidnaping trail led to Detroit, where a similar kidnaping had occurred, but fizzled.

Dr. Ramsay said the Thompsons would be "far down the list" to adopt Tommy if an "exhaustive investigation" discloses they are not his parents.

If blood tests show a possibility the State ward is Ronnie, Dr. Ramsay said, he will insist on a conference between the alleged mother, "now 35 to 40 years old," the sister who gave the child to the Mexican family and members of the family themselves.

The Thompsons came here yesterday to see the child at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Foote where he had been staying.

Still pending is action on a "cooperative agreement" between NCHA and the Commissioners covering razing of substandard dwellings in the same number as new ones erected and other matters such as payments to the city in lieu of taxes. The city heads yesterday decided to give the agreement further consideration after discussing it with Ihlder.

Shirley Temple Discloses She Is Obtaining Divorce

months denying reports of squabbles in their full-sized doll-house home where she used to play when she was a miniature movie queen. Their friends said the marriage blew up because Agar was a "table-hopper."

"That sums it up," said one studio executive. "Anybody who went to night clubs could see what was happening. John liked to run around to all the tables and talk to everybody. He'd leave Shirley sitting alone.

"Other times he wouldn't take her out at all. He liked to hang around with the boys and play cards or golf."

Another friend said, "The kid's sick and tired of being insulted time and time again in public."

Agar's friends said the bust-up wasn't his fault alone.

Say She's a Little Spoiled

"Shirley's a little spoiled and emotionally young," they said.

The tall freckle-faced actor himself said he and Shirley called it a day "because we just couldn't see eye to eye."

"I am not fond of table-hopping," he said firmly. "Sure, I like to play golf, but I like to be at home with my wife and baby, too."

Shirley, who helped Agar start his own successful acting career, gulped she was "too unhappy and confused" to decide in what ways she'd been at fault.

"I've been crying over this a couple of weeks," she said. "I'm very upset, and I hope the papers make this as dignified and quiet as possible."

Both denied that their careers or Hollywood damaged their marriage. The actress said they would have parted no matter what town they lived in.

"I don't want this called a typical Hollywood marriage," she added. "This happens to lots of people. It wasn't mother-in-law trouble, either. Mother's always loved Jack and been crazy about him all through this."

Goes Home to Mother

Agar moved out last night and went home to mother. Mrs. John Agar, sr., said he "came in to tell me about it and was very unhappy."

Miss Temple returned to Hollywood only last night from a vacation trip to Palm Springs. Agar had stayed home to play golf.

The divorce suit charged "extreme cruelty and grevious mental suffering." Attorney George Stahlman, who filed it, said there is no community property. Apparently Shirley and Agar had kept their finances separate.

She asks custody of their only child, and return of her maiden name.

The golden-haired star married Agar at one of the fanciest of movietown weddings. At 17, she was barely old enough to have had her first kiss on the screen. He was 23.

At 18, Shirley came into the multimillion dollar fortune she earned as a dimpled moppet who danced into the world's heart in movies like "Little Miss Marker" in the 1930's. She began to get more grown-up roles in her movies, too.

The world had hardly become used to seeing her with a husband when they had a "Little Miss Marker" of their own.

Agar said he wouldn't contest a divorce suit. He said he'd like to get permission to see their baby often, though.

Sesqui Group Pushes Plans For Fair

Officials of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission will hold three meetings next week to get approval of plans for the Freedom Fair, which is expected to open next summer.

Edward Boykin, director of the commision, announced that a meeting with the National Park and Planning Commission will be held at 3 p. m. Thursday. A conference with the Fine Arts Commission is set for 10 a. m. Monday. Both will consider the building program of the fair, for which plans and specifications are being drawn.

The third meeting will be Thursday morning with Paul Green, author of a production based on the life of George Washington. Officials will discuss plans for an amphitheater in Rock Creek Park, where the drama will be presented during the celebration.

Adm. Byrd Says Reds Explored 'Little America'

New York, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd tonight said he had information the Russians had visited "Little America" near the South Pole in unnamed ships and had used powerful airplanes in exploration activities there.

Byrd, who has explored both North and South polar areas, did not disclose where his information was obtained.

He said there have been reports uranium can be found in the "Little America" regions, some of which are as large as the United States and have never been explored.

Byrd said another projected expedition by the United States to the South polar areas is now under consideration by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Turning Down Olds Is Bad, Truman Says

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday characterized the Senate's rejection of Leland S. Olds for a third term on the Foderal Power Commission as a bad thing.

The Chief Executive refused, however, to expand on the point or to be more explicit in his charges, made earlier in the long controversy, that certain corporations were behind the attack on Olds.

The best way to understand the situation, Mr. Truman told his weekly news conference, was just to read the record of the debate on the nomination.

The Senate's refusal to confirm Olds came about 12:15 a. m. yesterday after a night session. The vote was 53 to 15.

Asked if he would nevertheless give Olds a recess appointment, the President pointed out that such a step was not possible, once the Senate had voted to reject an individual. Nor, he said, did he have any person in mind at the moment to fill Olds' place on the FPC.

Supporters of Olds had contended that the real opposition to his reappointment came from gas and oil interests, fearful of his regulatory policies. Opponents said he was a foe of capitalism and free enterprise, as manifest by radical or pro-Communist articles written 20 years ago.

Olds himself had little to say yesterday about his defeat. He remarked only:

"I think everybody knows where I stand and what I stand for."

He said he had not "gotten around" to plans for another job.

President Truman refused to comment yesterday on whether he might resubmit to the Senate another nomination, that of Mon Walgren for chairman of the National Securities Resources Board.

As distinct from the Olds case, Mr. Truman withdrew the nomination of Walgren, former Governor of Washington, earlier this session when strong opposition developed.

Since the appointment never came up for a vote, the President can resubmit it. If no action is taken in the dying days of this congressional session, Mr. Truman can then give Walgren an interim appointment.

Reporters tried yesterday to draw the President out on several other political and congressional matters.

A reporter asked his views on the decision to close the congressional "five-percenters" investigation. Mr. Truman replied that he saw no sense in continuing it, inasmuch as they (the investigators) never had an intelligent investigation from the beginning.

Mr. Truman was questioned as to whether he would make a speech in New York in the current election campaign between Senator Dulles (R.) and his Democratic challenger, former Gov. Herbert Lehman.

He replied he was not anticipating such a step. Reports are that the political situation is in such a good fix there will be no need for it, he added with a laugh.

Would the President expand on a statement made some time ago that his political policy was guided by the Sermon on the Mount? a reporter asked.

The only expansion possible, Mr. Truman said, was to be found from a reading of Chapters 5, 6 and 7 of the Gospel according to St. Matthew, the sermon itself.

The roll call by which the Senate early yesterday rejected the nomination of Leland Olds to a third term on the Federal Power Commission:

Bill Signed to Provide Funds for Works Plans

President Truman yesterday signed into law a bill authorizing 100 million dollars in Federal loans to States for advance planning of public works.

The idea behind the new law is to prepare for any downturn in business by having public projects ready to take up any slump in employment.

Boy, 6, Is Found Drowned in Pool

of a small creek tributary of Paint Branch.

The discovery was made by Merrill Thorne and Lindy A. Kirby of the Oxen Hill Volunteer Fire Department, Robert A. Yost and Roy Urner of the Cottage City Fire Department, and three Oxon Hill High School students, Vernon Hayden, Robert Thorne and Robert DeMar.

Thorne poked a stick below the bank of the pool. The stick jabbed against the boy's submerged body. Kirby went into the water, waist deep, and brought out the body, which was lying in 39 inches of water.

The child was still wearing his brown shorts and striped basque shirt, but was barefoot, Wednesday, searchers found the boy's shoes and one of his socks, apparently removed in his backyard before he set out on his late afternoon adventure.

The child's left eye was gouged and bloodshot and the skin on one cheek was torn. However, Dr. Broschart said both injuries were inflicted after death and probably were caused by the probing sticks of the searchers.

The pool is about a mile northeast of the boy's home, and about a half a mile from the spot on Orchard Way where he was last seen at about 5 p. m. Tuesday.

It is only 300 yards from the dead end of Orchard Way, where sometime between 7 and 8 p. m. Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. John Fagan heard a child cry, "Mommy, mommy."

Police believe that it was the Mason boy she heard. They believe that when he reached the dead end of Orchard Way, he continued down a wooded slope, and bore off to the left to the pool where his body was found.

This particular spot was known to have been searched at least four times and possibly as many as 10 times. However, the body was well concealed under the overhanging bank, which was only 2 feet from the surface of the water.

At the time the discovery was made, the number of searchers had grown to about 500. The second day of the intensive hunt for the missing boy had begun at 6 a. m.

The finding of the boy's body bore out the prophecy of his father made Wednesday night that he did not believe his child would be found alive.

A tip that proved false had sent the father and a party of searchers to the vicinity of the Laurel race track shortly before noon. It was there that Mason learned of his son's death. Two older sons, William and Leroy, jr., were with him.

William said that suddenly someone yelled, "The body's been found." William said that his father ran to a State police car, jumped in and was driven off immediately.

Mason was haggard and near a state of complete exhaustion. Except for four hours' sleep, he had plunged relentlessly through the countryside in search of his son since 9 p. m. Tuesday. He went sleepless the first night, slept only four hours the second night and could not be persuaded to eat until yesterday afternoon.

As the word spread that the search was at an end, hundreds of persons assembled in the roadway in front of the Mason home. Police barred all but officials so that the family could nurse its grief in privacy.

Father Expresses Thanks

However, later in the afternoon, Mason asked that those who had led in the search and reporters meet with him in his business office adjoining the house—a converted two-car garage. He said:

"I want to thank the Army, all civilians, police, Marines, and everyone who participated in the search. I want to leave no one out. I extend to all my greatest thanks.

"I want also to include the pilots of the planes, in fact, all who had anything to do with the search, whether they were here or not. This includes the radios and newspapers as well."

Mason was asked by reporters how his wife had taken the news. "She is bearing up very well," he said.

After Mason had left the meeting, his son, William, was asked how the father had reacted to the news of the boy's death.

"Dad took it as every father would," said the son.

Minister Breaks News

The son said the news was broken to his mother by the Rev. Paul H. Groseclose, pastor of the Colesville Methodist Church. The Mason family does not attend the Rev. Mr. Groseclose's church, but he had been one of the searchers who had devoted their full time to hunt since the boy's disappearance.

The crowd accepted news of the child's death with weary resignation, then slowly dissipated. By 4 p. m. only a few police officials and newsmen remained. An Army detail was picking up the debris left behind by the crowd.

The dead boy's younger brother, Roger, 4, who himself narrowly escaped drowning in the same area a year ago, was playing with a football on the lawn of the home.

A sister, Maribel, 8, leaned against the white fence that surrounds the Mason estate, not sure of what had happened.

"How's your mommy?" a reporter asked her.

"I just don't know," she answered, her face screwed up in a puzzled frown. "I just don't know."

Mrs. Mason's sister-in-law, Mrs. E. W. Pittman, came out of the house and swept the scattered leaves from the front steps.

Called Devoted Father

The neighbors had some glimmering of what a blow had fallen on this close-knit and affectionate family.

Mason, said one, was a devoted father to all of his seven children, but he lavished a special sort of affection on the son who had drowned, perhaps because of the thyroid condition, which left him retarded.

They remembered the boy as a child of unusual physical strength, probably equal to that of a 12-year-old. They remembered his constant smile, his sunny disposition and his favorite greeting, "Hi, boy."

Only police officials and rescue workers were close to the pool from which the child's body was taken. The body was first stretched on the bank and covered with a firemen's coat. Then it was carried by stretcher to open ground at the foot of Orchard Way, where the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad ambulance waited. There Dr. Broschart made his examination.

Taken To Funeral Home

The body was taken to the Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia ave. nw. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Yesterday's search was taken up by 150 soldiers from Fort Meade, 50 Marines from the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, county and State police, volunteer firemen and civilians. Seven walkie-talkies were used.

The operation was directed by County Police Chief Charles M. Orme, assisted by Lieut. Col. John B. Manley, post provost marshal at Fort Meade. Three planes, two of them from Fort Meade, flew overhead.

A tip by Howard Nalley, 28, a cab driver, of Jessups, Md., sent searchers and most of the officials in charge to a scene near the Laurel track shortly before noon. He reported he had seen a child answering the description of the Mason boy there Tuesday night.

It was while the search was being pressed near Laurel that word came that the body had been found.

Reporters who remembered the dogs that had tagged along at the boy's heels Tuesday afternoon when he set off on his last adventure did not see them yesterday.

Perhaps they knew where their little master had gone.

Suburb Policeman Off Pending Probe

Bladensburg Police Pvt. Clifton L. Bartley, 29, was relieved of duty early yesterday a short time after he was found semiconscious near a building in Bladensburg where he is employed as a part-time watchman.

Police Chief Henry J. Nebel said he suspended Bartley pending investigation of his explanation of his injuries and the fact that his service revolver, lying nearby, had been fired once.

Nebel said he asked Bartley to surrender his gun and his badge when the officer told his chief he was "too nervous to talk," a short time after the incident. Later, Nebel said, Bartley gave him a statement in which he said he had fallen while walking down a ramp to investigate a noise nearby.

The policeman was found a short distance from the building where he works by an unidentified truck driver who was delivering supplies to a nearby grocery store just before midnight Wednesday. The truck driver said his attention was attracted by the report of a gun.

In his statement to Nebel, Bartley said he had rushed out to investigate when he heard the truck approach. He said he slipped on some loose gravel and his gun discharged as he fell from the ramp.

The chief emphasized that no charges have been placed against Bartley. However, he said, the policeman cannot be reinstated until he is given a hearing before the Bladensburg mayor and town council.

Vote Is Slated On '50 Cotton Crop Quotas

The Government told cotton growers yesterday they must choose between a big cut in production next year or a tremendous cut in Government price supports.

The choice will be put to growers in a referendum on December 15. They will vote whether they want Government quotas on next year's crop and the stiff penalties for noncompliance.

If the growers reject them, price supports for the 1950 crop will either be slashed by about 45 percent or eliminated entirely, depending on Congress' final decision in pending farm legislation.

Acceptance Urged

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan urged growers to accept quotas, saying cotton plantings must be cut back 20 percent next year to hold down burdensome surpluses.

If quotas are approved, it will be the first time they have been used on cotton since 1942. At least two thirds of the growers voting in a referendum must approve before quotas can be imposed. A favorable vote is expected.

Cotton farmers voted for quotas six times before the war to combat surpluses. The average majority in all cases was about 90 per cent. Quotas have never been rejected in a referendum.

Brannan explained that he must submit the referendum this year under the law, which requires such action any time cotton supplies exceed normal. The department said supplies now exceed normal by 27.1 percent.

24 Percent Drop Is Goal

He said the control program would be aimed at cutting production from an estimated 15,446,000 bales this year to 11,733,750 bales in 1950. That would be a drop of about 24 percent.

To curtail output, Brannan set a national planting allotment of 21 million acres for 1950, a cut of about 20 percent under this year's planting of 26,300,000 acres, which was the largest since 1937.

If quotas are approved supports for the 1950 crop may be held at the present 90 percent of parity.

Red in U. N. Uses Proverb To Prove Point

Lake Success, Oct. 13 (AP).—"When a pretty girl makes a mistake, it does not make her less pretty."

This is an old Russian proverb, recited to the United Nations Legal Committee today by Soviet Delegate V. M. Koretzky to prove his point that while he recognized the ability of his colleagues, he did not necessarily regard them as infallible.

Sir Hartley Shawcross, Britain's attorney general, whispered something to Koretzky.

"Mr. Shawcross," Koretzky tattled to the committee, "has said that he hopes pretty girls will continue to make occasional mistakes."

Retirement Bill For Deaf Approved

The House yesterday gave final congressional approval to the bill extending the civil service retirement law to employes of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf. The measure now goes to the White House.

The final step was voice vote approval of a conference report recommending the original House version of the bill.

House Rejects Flexible Props For Crops

The House yesterday refused to accept the Senate bill to set up a flexible system for farm-price supports. It stood by its own measure continuing the present program of 90 percent of parity props for major crops.

However, the House voted to negotiate with the Senate on a compromise, through a House-Senate conference committee. This committee may face a rugged tug of war between representatives of the two bodies before an agreement is reached. The conferees will hold their first meeting today.

Meanwhile, President Truman expressed belief Senate and House conferees can work out an acceptable farm bill for his signature.

Recalls Own Experience

He said at his news conference that a compromise between the Senate's sliding-scale support program and the House 90 percent of parity props might not be what anybody wants.

He said that, based on his own experience in the Senate, he believes it is possible for the conference committee to write legislation that is acceptable.

The President had no comment to make on his own views of what the farm bill should contain, but some callers have said he wants supports at 90 percent of parity.

The Senate's bill would permit supports as low as 75 percent for basic crops, except that they would get 90 percent in 1950 if they were under production or marketing controls.

After weeks of debate, a coalition of Senate Democrats and Republicans on Tuesday pushed through on a voice vote the bill sponsored by Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture.

Optimism Expressed

They substituted it for the one-year continuance of wartime-level price supports voted by the House in mid-July..

Farm-minded House members talked optimistically about forcing Senators to take their one-year extension of existing price props at least for 1950—a year when all 435 House members and more than a third of the Senators must face the farmers and other voters.

Bands to Head Dog Parade at Annual Mart

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.)—Even the ugliest mutt imaginable will be in his glory Saturday when this city turns out en masse for its historic annual Dog Mart.

Nearly 500 dogs from this area and surrounding States will parade through the city's streets accompanied by bands from Mary Washington College and James Monroe High School. Owners, dogs and spectators then will gather at the high school stadium for the Mart.

Besides a bench show and auction, there will be a trick and obedience act, tribal dances by the Pamunkey Indian tribe in full regalia, contests for old fiddlers, horn blowers, hog-callers and greased-pole climbers.

Special prizes of $5 each will be awarded to the owner of the ugliest dog in the parade and the homeliest at the Mart.

The Dog Mart started in 1698 when the settlers of Fredericksburg—then called Leaseland—and the Indians decided to call it quits on their squabbles once a year so they could exchange goods. The Indians traded gold nuggets and furs for the Colonists' superior hunting dogs.

The Mart flourished until the Revolutionary War, when it was called off because of unrest of the Indians. Among other things, it seemed, the Indians thought that they were getting "scalped" in their trading with the shrewd settlers.

The Mart was revived in 1927 and grew in Nation-wide fame until it was discontinued because of World War II. It was revived again last year.

The Pamunkey Indians will be led by Chief T. D. Cook, their pure-blooded leader.

There will be no admission charge to the Mart, sponsored by the Izaak Walton League chapter here and the Chamber of Commerce. The parade will start at 10:30 a. m. Homemade food and refreshments will be on sale at the stadium.

Army Denies GIs Were in Red Zone Of Own 'Free Will'

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 13 (AP).—Russian claims that three American GIs remained in the Soviet zone of Austria of their own "free will" were contradicted today by an American Army spokesman, who said they had been kept in a guarded room.

The men, released last Friday, were recruit Carl Ruhnke of Miami, Ariz.; Pvt. Peter Pontillo of Cleveland, Ohio, and recruit Charles J. Preuster of Newark, N. J.

American officials are trying to effect the release of a fourth soldier, Pvt. Philip Morand, who entered the Russian zone last November 10. He told another soldier the Russians had offered him "liquor, women and money" if he would desert, the spokesman said.

Soon after he left, the Army broke up a ring that it said was trying to entice American soldiers in the Linz area to desert to the Russians.

Douglases See Pope

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Oct. 13 (U.P.)—United States Ambassador to London, Lewis E. Douglas, his wife and their daughter, Sharman, were received in private audience today by Pope Pius XII.

Upper Marlboro Fair Crowns High School Girl 1949 Queen

Blonde Mary Evelyn Wyvill was crowned queen of the Southern Maryland Fair at Upper Marlboro yesterday as Prince Georges County's annual agricultural exhibit entered its second day.

An estimated 2000 persons braved threatening weather to see the pretty 17-year-old Frederick Sasscer High School senior crowned by L. Ed O'Hara, general manager of the fair, who acted as a substitute for Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer. Representative Sasscer was detained at the last minute by business.

The coronation was the opening feature of a colorful two-hour pageant presented by more than 300 pupils of the high school and the Upper Marlboro Elementary School.

Centering on the theme "America, the Melting Pot" the pageant featured songs and folk dances of more than a dozen countries whose natives have migrated to this country.

In cattle judging classes yesterday, three out of four major awards went to W. H. McCeney, jr., of Silver Spring. He exhibited the grand champion female, the reserve champion female and the grand champion bull in the short horn beef cattle division. The fourth award in the short horn class went to F. M. Reeder of Mount Victoria, Md., who entered the reserve champion bull.

Today has been designated as "Governor's Day," and Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., is expected at the show grounds at 1 p. m. to view the exhibits.

Virgin Islands Urged to Build New Power Plant

A recommendation has been made that the Power Authority of the Virgin Islands build a new electrical power plant to replace the Army plant at Charlotte Amalie, used for municipal electricity.

The recommendation followed a survey, made by Franklin P. Wood, 75, electrical engineer, who retired August 31 as head of the power management section, Rural Electrification Administration. He lives at 4801 Connecticut ave. nw.

The Army plant, built during the war and uneconomical in use of fuel oil and maintenance, should be kept for emergency purposes, according to Wood's report.

Wood, who spent 14 years with REA after a long career in power engineering, is continuing his work as a private consultant to nonprofit suppliers since his retirement. He made the survey at the request of Roy P. Gordon, chairman of the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John, legislative body of the Virgin Islands.

The Montgomery County League of Women Voters will meet for its first fall meeting at 12:30 today at Rock Creek shetler house, Beach dr. and Leland st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Mrs. Howard K. Hyde will lead discussion on subjects covering health insurance, conservation of national resources and constitutional liberties.

Georgetown Citizens Save Three Elms

Opposition by the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown resulted yesterday in changing plans for street widening at Wisconsin ave. and Q st. nw. and saving three elms scheduled for removal.

The District Engineer's Department directed the Highway Department to remove eight elms and leave three on Q st. near Wisconsin ave. which had been marked for uprooting.

Two weeks ago, the association submitted a petition requesting a change in the tree removal plans and the Highway Department referred the matter to Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner.

The eight trees will be removed next week to permit completion of underground utilities before the road changes are started.

Truman to Name 6 D. C. Judges Soon

President Truman said yesterday he hopes to send to the Senate before Congress quits the names of the six new District of Columbia judges.

Three are to be named to the United States Court of Appeals and three to the District Court. Their names must be submitted before Congress adjourns if they are to be paid before they are confirmed at the next session beginning in January. They are expected to be given additional recess appointments as soon as Congress goes home.

The President conferred yesterday with Attorney General J. Howard McGrath and Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle. It is understood they reached a decision on the six nominees.

AEC Starting Radioactive Oyster Study

A Beaufort, N. C., building formerly used for the hatching of baby terrapin is about to become the home of what it is hoped will be radioactive oysters.

The Atomic Energy Commission hopes to learn more from the experiment than it did at Bikini about the accumulation of radioactive material in marine organisms, and the possible effects upon shellfish.

And the fish and wildlife service is looking for information that has heretofore eluded its seafood experts on how to fatten oysters.

Dr. Clarence Cottam, acting director of the service, said yesterday the two agencies have agreed upon cooperative financing and supervision of the project.

Laboratory Reopened

He said Dr. Walter A. Chipman, an expert on oyster nutrition, was sent to Beaufort in August to reopen the fisheries biological laboratory there, inactive since the war.

Chipman will ply his watery wards with minute amounts of radioactive chemical substances from the AEC's isotope division at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Cottam added.

"It has long been known that oysters feed on one-celled plants and animals and other minute organisms or plant material normally abundant in sea water," Cottam said.

"There is still disagreement among scientists on the food organisms used by oysters.

No Method Developed

"Consequently, no successful method of artificially feeding or conditioning oysters has ever been developed."

Organisms suspected of being oyster food will be grown in water containing radioactive chemicals—radioisotopes—which they will absorb, Cottam said.

These "hot" organisms then will be fed to experimental oysters in the laboratory.

Since the isotopes can be traced, the food which is digested and incorporated into the tissues may then be determined chemically and by radiation measurement, Cottam explained.

Cain Accused Of Filibuster

restrictions. McCarran, a Catholic, has denied that the bill is discriminatory.

Opponents of changes in the law at this time have scheduled enough speeches so that it is obvious the Senate cannot adjourn before next Wednesday or Thursday in any event.

Cain charged the Administration with trying to rush through the DP bill for political reasons. He complained that McCarran had been treated rudely by the Judiciary Committee.

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), acting committee chairman, accused Cain of violating Senate rules by casting reflections on other members of the committee.

A major part of Cain's speech against the bill was an attack on the lobby conducted by the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons, which he said is "one of the strongest lobby groups ever to operate in the National Capital."

"During the last two years the Citizen's Committee on Displaced Persons has expended close to $900,000 on behalf of legislation which would enlarge and extend the scope of the Displaced Persons Act of 1948," Cain declared.

Among the expenditures he listed from the lobby's report to the House was an item of $238.54 to Senator Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.).

The list disclosed that the item was for travel expenses. Magnuson told reporters, and later told the Senate, that he had spoken on the DP problem as one of a panel at Tulane University in January, 1948, and had been reimbursed for his air travel expenses in filling the last-minute engagement. Cain has threatened to resign from the Senate to run against Magnuson.

Still in disagreement between House and Senate are two important issues—the farm program and the dispute over the size of the Air Force which has blocked approval of the military appropriations measure.

Congress meanwhile completed action on two bills which would:

1. Increase by $2,275,000,000 the Government's authority to purchase and insure mortgages to encourage house building. The measure also extends for an additional four months certain aspects of the Federal housing program.

2. Permit American tourists to bring home an additional $100 worth of duty-free purchases from abroad.

On other bills:

The House and Senate passed measures to put into effect this country's participation in the international wheat agreement with 41 other nations. There were minor differences in the versions, and final action will not come until one house accepts the other's bill.

'Richest Bride' of '24 Is Wed for 2d Time

London, Oct. 13 (AP).—Cornelia Vanderbilt, once called the world's richest bride, was married a second time yesterday.

The American granddaughter of famed Commodore Vanderbilt was married in secrecy to Vivian Francis Bulkeley-Johnson, 58-year-old London banker. A notice of intention to wed gave her age as 43.

Miss Vanderbilt married John Francis Amherst Cesil, then First Secretary of the British Embassy in Washington, in an ultrafashionable wedding in Washington in 1924. They were divorced 10 years later.

Support Case Big Headache For Justice

Pittsburgh, Oct. 13 (AP).—Three husbands, three children and one wife are involved in the most complicated support case ever to come before the Allegheny County courts.

The death of the wife, Mrs. Mary Weidenhoff Grant Dotson, brought the case into court. She married and divorced these men in turn: William Weidenhoff of Butler, Woodrow W. Grant of Bellevue and Harry Dotson of Homestead.

She had a child by each husband. Grant also adopted a daughter fathered by Weidenhoff. When she married Dotson, he took over support of the Grant and Weidenhoff children in addition to his own.

Testimony before the court claimed Grant took back his child and Weidenhoff's after Mrs. Dotson's death without Dotson's knowledge. The children were then living with Dotson. Dotson sued Grant for support of Grant's child, a 10-year-old girl, and for Weidenhoff's child, a girl of 12.

Judge Blair F. Gunther ordered Grant to pay Dotson $107. Then he rubbed his forehead and sighed: "Life can be complicated."

The Gallup Poll

Anti-Trust Control Of Unions Favored

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 13. — The laws against monopoly should apply with equal force to labor unions as to business firms, in the opinion of most voters who are familiar with the meaning of the term monopoly.

At present labor unions are exempt from the Federal anti-trust laws. But the power of John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers Union over the coal industry has raised a good deal of discussion as to whether unions should continue to be exempt, particularly in view of the increasing amount of industry-wide bargaining found in labor relations today.

To determine how the Nation's voters feel about this issue, a balanced cross-section in each of the 48 States was asked, first, what the term "monopoly" means and, second, whether unions should have to live up to the same laws concerning monopoly as corporations do.

The first question was:

"Just in your own words, will you tell me what a 'monopoly' is?"

Approximately seven out of every ten voters (69 percent) gave a reasonably accurate definition of the familiar term.

These voters were then asked:

"Do you think that labor unions —such as in the coal industry— should be subject to the same laws dealing with monopolies as big business firms are?"

The vote follows:

Yes	49%
No	11
No opinion	9
	69%
Don't know what monopoly is	31
	100%

One interesting aspect of the survey is that members of labor unions questioned in the sample expressed much the same opinion on the monopoly issue as the rest of the country.

Business and professional people, as might be expected, are the most in favor of having antitrust laws apply to unions. Here is the vote by occupational groups:

	Yes	No	No Opin.
Bus. and Prof.	71%	10%	6%
White Collar	54	15	10
Farmers	49	5	9
Manual Workers	34	11	11
Labor union members	36	16	9

Some Smoke Here

14,377 Work In District Industries

The next time Aunt Emma comes to town, don't brag about Washington's not having any factories and that's-why the-buildings-stay-so-white.

The Nation's Capital may not rank high as an industrial city but there are factories here. And the Census Bureau yesterday released figures to prove it.

At the end of 1947, reports the Government agency, there were 428 industrial plants here which employed 17,815 workers. The last previous Federal enumeration was in 1939 when 452 plants were counted with a payroll of 14,377.

Major private industry here is printing and publishing. In this category are 213 establishments, employing 9847 persons. Next in importance is food and kindred products with 87 plants keeping 5185 at work.

Accounting for the rest of the total are industries such as apparel, paper, chemical, stone, clay and glass products, fabricated metal products, electrical machinery, instruments and many miscellaneous ones.

The industrial workers here received wages totaling $55,872,000 in 1947, as compared with $24,920,000 in 1939.

Those figures sound sizeable, but contrast them with average Government employment of 227,000 last year with an annual payroll in excess of 780 million dollars.

You may be forgiven if you sort of overlook the industrial angle in pointing out the city's highlights to Aunt Emma.

Theresa, N. Y., Oct. 13 (AP).—Joseph Bacon, 82, smelled smoke and hopped out of his bathtub to find his kitchen ceiling and wall aflame.

Special Care Need In Cancer Stressed

New York, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A "spectacular" drop in the cancer death rate would result if the best treatment for the disease were available in all communities, Dr. C. P. Rhoades, director of Memorial Hospital Center for Cancer and Allied Diseases, said today.

He spoke at the 58th annual meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Medical Directors, reading a paper prepared by Mary MacDonald, biometrician of the hospital, and her sister, Eleanor MacDonald, consultant.

"Certain cancer sites are considerably accessible and amenable to cure," the paper said, "while others bring more acute and discouraging problems. The cure rate at the community level for accessible sites is approximately 21.7 percent and at the specialized hospital level, 27.0 percent.

"If it were possible to effect without delay the application of the best methods of therapy on the community level, without an additional improvement or discovery, there would be an increase in cures of 24.3 percent in those sites of cancer, representing 42.9 per cent of total new cases and 42.6 per cent of total reported deaths.

"Many patients are referred to the cancer hospital after therapy elsewhere has been tried without result.

And yet, the net cure rate at the community level is 25.0 per cent; at the specialized cancer hospital, 31.5 per cent. The difference in these rates means 2670 cures for this site alone in one year in the United States."

Polio Cases Show Decline All Over U. S.

The seventh consecutive weekly decrease in new polio cases reported throughout the country was announced by the Public Health Service yesterday.

New cases reported for the week ended last Saturday in the District, Virginia and Maryland were also lower than for the previous week.

There were 1588 new cases last week in the Nation, compared with 1856 during the week ended October 1, and 1207 during the corresponding week last year.

The District reported four cases last week, four less than the previous week, but one more than was reported during the week ended September 24.

Virginia's figure for the week ended last Saturday was 12, as compared with 13 for each of the previous weeks. Maryland's total dropped from 13 the previous week to 10 last week, as reported to the Public Health Service.

Records showed a cumulative total for the Nation of 34,742 cases reported up to last Saturday, compared to 20,381 cases during the corresponding period of last year.

Thirty States reported a decrease last week, while 17 showed an increase. A drop of 65 cases in New York was the largest decrease, while Indiana reported the largest rise, of 26 new cases.

Britons Ask Ban On Contraceptives In Slot Machines

London, Oct. 13 (AP).—Organized city officials of Britain today demanded a government ban on sale of contraceptives by slot machine.

The Association of Municipal Corporations declared the practice is "harmful and dangerous to the individual and the state, and especially to young people."

Alderman S. F. Johnson of Southend-On-Sea proposed the resolution.

"Any nation or people which will fatten and batten itself on the immorality of its people has no right to exist," he declared.

Johnson said he understands the Ministry of Supply has suggested the slot machines be manufactured for export as well as the domestic market.

"We are not satisfied with perverting the morals of our young children," he said. "We want to pervert the minds and morals of all the nations of the world."

Urine Tests For Diabetes Offered Free

Starting today, free urinalyses will be offered to all Washington residents who may be unknown diabetics.

The mass screening campaign is being sponsored by the District Diabetes Associations as part of national observances of Diabetes Detection Week, which opened last Monday and has been extended through next week.

Collection centers for samples of urine have been established at 18 local drugstores, where samples will be picked up each morning and tested by the association for the presence of sugar—the first warning of diabetes.

Analyzed Same Day

Dr. Maurice Protas, president of the association, urged the free tests. The purpose of the screening is to discover diabetes in its early stages, when proper treatment will enable the diabetic to live a long and normal life.

Residents should collect samples of urine in a clean, two-ounce bottle about two hours after eating a breakfast that includes starchy foods such as cereals, potatoes, bread or waffles, he said. The bottle labeled with name and address should be left at one of the drugstores by 10 a. m. It will be analyzed the same day.

When sugar is found, the person submitting the sample will be notified as soon as possible and urged to see his doctor immediately for a blood test to confirm the screening test. No notices will be sent where tests are negative.

The following drugstores will accept urine samples:

Maxwell & Tennyson, 1726 and 1835 I st. nw.; Kinner & Membert, 301 Kennedy st. nw.; Higgers, 1517 Connecticut ave. nw.; Medical Arts Pharmacy, 1720 I st. nw.; Petworth Pharmacy, 4201 Georgia ave. nw.; Georgetown Pharmacy, 1344 Wisconsin ave. nw., and Peoples Drug Stores, at 661 Pennsylvania ave. se., 14th st. and Thomas Circle nw., 1319 H st. ne., 2026 Rhode Island ave. ne., 3220 14th st. nw., 5550 Connecticut ave. nw., 3200 M st. nw., 1000 F st. nw., 1014 Connecticut ave. nw. and 505 7th st. sw.

USC to Study Problem of Chronically Ill

A study of Washington's chronically ill persons is to be undertaken by the health section of the United Community Services (UCS).

The study was agreed on yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the section. Basis of the survey will be conclusions reached in the Washington Metropolitan Health Survey, completed some time ago.

Members of the section were indoctrinated on the subject yesterday by Dr. Charlotte Donlan, director of the District Health Department's Bureau of Cancer Control; Dr. Darrell C. Crain, a practicing physician, and Mrs. Lucille Smith, executive secretary of the National Commission on Chronic Illness.

Statistics On Cases

Dr. Donlan pointed out that at least 20 million persons in the United States are cronically ill. Of this number, 7 million have "appreciable disability," and 1½ million are invalids. She stated that three fourths of all chronieally ill individuals are "in the productive years of 15 to 64."

Dr. Crain said many persons in Washington won't face the problem of chronic illness. He described outpatient facilities here for treatment of the chornically ill as "very good."

Dr. Crain, who formerly was chairman of the subcommittee on care of chroic illness for the Washington health survey, said that the two university hospitals (George Washington and Georgetown) are doing a good job in their outpatient service.

He added, however, that it is on an in-patient care basis that Washington hospitals have their biggest deficit. Hospitals, he said, simply are not set up for long-time chronic care.

Mrs. Smith said the public must not think of convalescence and rehabilitation of the chronically ill in terms of institutions. She declared the scope of the problem is demanding new methods.

"It behooves us to see," she said, "that the chronically ill stay healthy so that there will be enough productive persons to support the whole of society."

Isadore Seeman, secretary to the UCS health section, announcing that a permanent committee would be formed as an initial step in the study, declared: "We never have offered the community an organized plan for the care of the chronically ill, and we never have put a price tag on such a plan."

199 Area Polio Cases Reported

Two new cases of polio were reported by health authorities yesterday, bringing the Washington area total to 199 for the year.

Diagnosed at Children's Hospital as the sixteenth Fairfax County victim of the year was an 11-year-old girl from Vienna, Va. She entered the hospital October 4, but no diagnosis was issued until yesterday.

Other totals for the season are: the District, 87; Prince Georges County, 46; Montgomery County, 26; and Arlington, 16.

Historic Sites Held Bulwark Of Patriotism

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.). Preservation of our historic sites is one of the greatest investments Americans can make to combat un-Americanism, Representative Peterson (D., Fla.) said here today.

Peterson, chairman of the House Public Lands Committee and an ardent historian and collector, spoke before delegates at the third annual meeting of the National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings.

Enthusiasm of the delegates was dampened only by a report that their primary objective, creation of a national trust for the preservation of historic sites in the United States, is caught in the preadjournment logjam of the Senate.

Pointing to the need for the trust, Peterson said the memories of the great men and women of the Nation do not belong to any one section.

"No American In Right Mind"

"They are important to the fabric of the history of the whole country, and to the fabric of the future of the whole United States," he said.

"Preservation of the places where American history was made . . . and a proper appreciation of that history and of the men and women who made it will do more than anything else to keep down un-Americanism in this country.

"No American in his right mind can tread these streets of Williamsburg, or view Independence Hall at Philadelphia, or visit George Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon and have in his heart the desire to destroy this nation.

The National Council, a federation of historical societies and groups with allied interests, was organized in June, 1947. About 44 national, state and local organizations are members.

Delegates Inspect Projects

This afternoon, delegates and members split up into small groups to inspect restoration work already done in Williamsburg. Since most already are familiar with the bulk of work done here since its start in 1927, their interest centered in the three newest projects: Restoration of the Brush Everard House, the Kings Arms Barbershop, and the Nicholson Shop.

The conference ends Friday, following a meeting of delegates to discuss restoration projects now under way throughout the country.

33 Students From Arlington Go to Manassas

Thirty-three Arlington high school students are expected to start attending Virginia's regional vocational high school in Manassas Monday, Supt. William A. Early said yesterday.

Two Negro youngsters began classes at the State operated school this week, where there are facilities for both white and Negro children, Early said. Transfer of the 33 white youngsters has hinged on procurement of a bus, on order at a cost of $4300.

The county school board approved transfer of the youngsters since shop facilities are far more comprehensive at the State school than in Arlington's own junior and senior high schools.

ECA Rebuilds Fund To Cut Trade Curbs

Paris, Oct. 13 (NYHT).—The Economic Cooperation Administration has ordered a 4.385 percent cut in 1949-50 Marshall Plan aid to all but two of the receiving countries to restore a general reserve fund of 150 million dollars. The Organization for European Economic Cooperation disclosed today.

The bulk of the research fund is to be distributed to countries that do the most to reduce trade barriers. The two nations exempted are Belgium and Sweden. Both grant drawing rights to other countries equal to or greater than the dollar aid they receive. Robert Marjolin, secretary-general of the OEEC, said no country can count with certainty on receiving the full amount of aid, since the ECA emphasized the allocations are to be "kept under review" with an eye to performance of the participating countries.

Marjolin announced these other developments today:

1. A decision by the OEEC council to create a five-man "central group" to supervise bilateral negotiations among OEEC members for reduction of import quotas on each other's goods;

2. Approval by member states of collective participation in a trade fair to be held next year in the United States, the date and place as yet undetermined.

After Hard Fight

Moch Backed By Assembly For Premier

Paris, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Socialist Jules Moch apparently won confirmation as Premier of France today after a bitter hours-long battle against Communist and right-wing opposition in the National Assembly.

An unofficial tally gave Moch 316 of the 620 votes in the assembly, five more than the 311 he needed.

An official count was delayed by two disputes which were turned over for settlement to the Assembly steering committee. Two votes were involved.

Moch, hated by the Communists, was designated premier by President Vincent Auriol Tuesday. Under parliamentary procedure, he must get a confidence vote before he can form his government.

The dispute over the vote count concerned that of an independent deputy whose resignation was announced to the Assembly yesterday and of an absent member of the right wing Republican Liberty Party.

In the former, the deputies were in disagreement whether the resignation already was effective. In the latter, concerning Maurice Montel, a fellow deputy claimed to have a letter from Montel authorizing him to vote as he saw fit and so he voted against Moch.

Moch then produced a telegram from Montel saying he was for Moch. A transatlantic phone call was placed to Lake Success, N. Y., where Montel is attending the United Nations Assembly.

Jacques Duclos, Communist leader, caused an uproar in debate when he called Moch "a murderer and an assassin," referring to workers killed by police in riots.

Church Trial Issue Ruling by Court Backed

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—The United Nations Special Political Committee today approved a proposal for an international court ruling in the East-West dispute over the trials of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty and other Balkan churchmen.

The plan, which goes now to the full General Assembly, calls for a decision by the Hague tribunal on whether Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania are obligated to submit the issue to arbitration machinery set up in the peace treaties. The Soviet bloc voted against it.

The committee vote was 41 to 5, far more than the two-thirds majority that will be needed in the ultimate Assembly balloting.

Nine nations abstained. Among them were Yugoslavia, whose quarrel with the Kremlin cropped up frequently in the debate, and Israel, which apparently is anxious not to jeopardize emigration of Jews remaining in eastern Europe. France also abstained.

The resolution does not ask the court to rule on the rightness or wrongness of western charges that treaty guarantees of human rights were violated in the prosecution of Mindszenty and other church leaders.

The aim of western power policy has been to get those charges arbitrated through use of machinery created in the peace treaties.

1. The 21-nation subcommittee screening varying proposals on the former Italian colonies voted 18 to 0 with three Soviet bloc absentions that any final resolution on the question should recommend that the administering authorities help establish "unity and independence" of Libya. Soviet delegate Amazas A. Arutiunian said he had abstained because he felt the administering powers—Britain and, in one small area, France—should proclaim immediate Libyan independence. The sub-group yesterday set a January 1, 1952, deadline for independence.

2. The Balkan conciliation team, headed by Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo, held separate conferences with American, Russian and British delegates in the morning and scheduled later meetings with Greece and its three northern neighbors.

3. The atomic powers—the Big Five and Canada—held the tenth in their series of closed-door meetings aimed at finding a way to loosen the long-standing deadlock over international atomic control.

4. Yugoslavia protested formally to United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie today against moves to kill off Yugoslavia's campaign for a Security Council seat, informed sources said.

Yugoslav Delegate Ales Bebler called on Lie this afternoon. Informants said he objected to maneuvers to swing a deal whereby the United States would drop its support of the Yugoslav bid in return for Soviet concessions on some other East-West issues.

Poles Report U. S. Architect Left No Trace

Warsaw, Poland, Oct. 13 (AP).—The American Embassy today said it had been advised by the Polish Foreign Ministry that Poland has been unable to find any trace of Hermann Field, Cleveland, Ohio, architect, missing since the end of August.

Field's brother, Noel, a former State Department employe, also has disappeared. He last was heard from in Budapest.

American diplomatic officials in Hungary and Czechoslovakia were asked by the State Department to try to locate them. Hermann vanished from sight after leaving Warsaw, presumably for Prague.

Embassy officials said they were at a loss to know what step to take now since all Polish authorities have declared they know nothing of Hermann's whereabouts.

Move to Seat Yugoslavia Made Serious U. N. Issue

Lake Success, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Soviet bloc in the United Nations tonight made a serious diplomatic issue out of American-supported efforts to elect Yugoslavia to the Security Council instead of Moscow-sponsored Czechoslovakia.

Identical notes were sent by five members of the Soviet bloc to each member of the United Nations calling for the election of Czechoslovakia.

A non-Russion eastern European source said if Yugoslavia wins the seat Russia will regard it as breaking up the four-power agreement dating back to Yalta on which the U. N. was founded.

12 Americans Killed As B-50 Explodes

Isleham, England, Oct. 13 (AP).—Twelve American airmen bound from Britain to Helgoland on a practice mission were blasted to death today by the plunge of their B-50 into a wheatfield with three tons of live bombs aboard.

The countryside for 12 miles around was jarred. None aboard escaped. Bodies and parts of the plane were hurled over wide areas.

The main explosion gouged out a crater ten feet deep and 30 feet wide. Separate blasts pockmarked the ground.

Hundreds of gallons of high octane gasoline flamed over the field, setting fire to barns and haystacks. Windows were broken and ceiling plaster fell in village homes near the scene.

The lost B-50 belonged to the Sixty-fifth Squadron of the Forty-third Bombardment Group, which came to England August 18, from its base at Tuscon, Ariz., for 90 days of operational training.

(An Air Force spokesman in Tucson, said "reports available at this time confirm that 11 crew members of the Sixty-fifth Bombardment Squadron and one Royal Air Force observer were killed.")

The plane crashed a few minutes after taking off from its base at Sculthorpe, Norfolk County.

"We heard the plane flying low over the village," said Miss Mary Clark, a postoffice clerk. "The tail of the machine was on fire and sparks were shooting out.

"The pilot appeared to be making an effort to avoid the houses. As soon as it cleared the village it came down in a wheat field and blew up with a terrific explosion.

All 12 bodies were recovered.

8300 Idled by Blast

Detroit, Oct. 13 (AP).—A power house explosion at a General Motors plant injured no one today but did so much damage it touched off a chain of layoffs. Altogether, 8300 workers were idled.

Vaughan, on Army's Payroll, Gets Salary Hike of $2394

By Robert S. Allen

Despite the congressional fulminating against him, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan will get a 25 per-cent increase in pay.

The White House aide will get this boost under the military pay raise bill voted by Congress.

As an officer on active duty, Vaughan is on the Army payroll. Under the bill, the pay of generals is increased 25 per cent. For Vaughan that will mean an additional $2304 per year, boosting his pay from $11,457 to $13,761.

In addition, he gets $1800 rental and $504 subsistence allowances. Also, a car and driver, and travel pay. The increased pay scale also will apply to Vaughan's pension as a reserve officer.

Woman Parades Ledge, Finally Leaps Into Net

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—A woman, clad only in lace panties, paraded along a foot-wide, third-story ledge outside her apartment for 20 minutes today.

Finally she jumped into a net held by firemen, and was taken to a psychopathic hospital.

She is Mrs. Helen Schwandt, 44, wife of Edward C. Schwandt. Her husband, operator of a parking lot, said he had gone earlier to police with documents to have his wife committed to the psychopathic hospital.

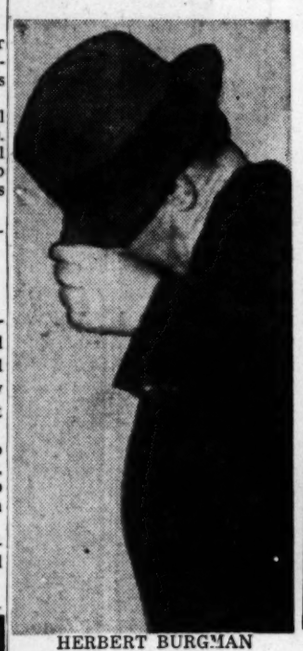
Nurse Shortage Curbs Operations

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A shortage of nurses has forced doctors at the Jersey City Medical Center to perform only emergency operations for the last two days, it was announced today.

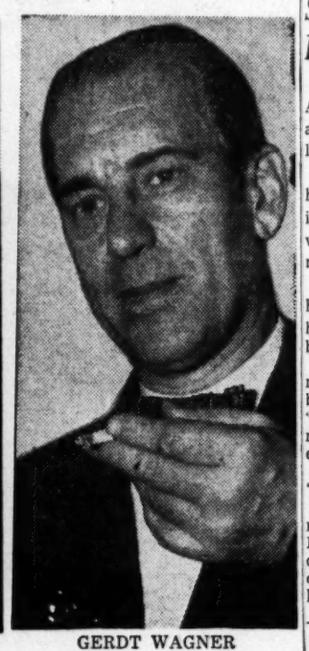
Dr. Gerald Sinnott, assistant to the medical director at the center, said the hospital would return to its normal operating schedule "in one or two days."

The Medical Center is the largest hospital in Hudson County and one of the largest in the State.

Burgman Trial Witness Tells Of Anti-Nazi 'Mission' to U. S.



HERBERT BURGMAN
Camera shy



GERDT WAGNER
Government witness

The intriguing background of a key Government witness exploded yesterday in District Court, momentarily overshadowing the question of whether Herbert Burgman is or is not guilty of treason against the United States.

Gerdt A. Wagner, wartime chief of the United States zone newsroom of the German radio, told of his prewar acquaintanceship with Jerome Frank, now a Federal judge, and Rexford Guy Tugwell, former New Deal braintruster.

At the end of the session he related to newsmen a story of having come to this country on a mission from an anti-Nazi element in the German high command.

His assignment to inform the United States Government that such an element existed was unsuccessful, Wagner said.

Unable to Give Names

Reporters repeatedly asked the German for names of ranking Government officials he attempted to see to convey this potentially crucial information.

He was unable to supply any such names.

Wagner told reporters that while employed by the German radio during the war he in reality was working for the German underground.

Wagner allegedly was Burgman's boss when Burgman broadcast a program over the German radio during the war.

Burgman, born in America, was chief clerk in the military attache's office of the United States Embassy at the outbreak of the war, but was not repatriated. The Government charges him with 20 overt acts of treason during the broadcasts over a station called DEBUNK. He faces a maximum penalty of death.

Wagner told reporters he was in this country from 1924 to 1940. On the witness stand he said he was an American citizen from 1936 to 1940 before returning to Germany.

Under cross-examination by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin, the witness said he was "not very well acquainted" with Tugwell. "I met him when a friend—a former friend—of mine lived with Mr. Tugwell."

Not Mentioned in Trial

Afterward, Wagner told reporters that Frank introduced him to Tugwell. On the stand he said he met Tugwell in Washington and that he (Wagner) and Frank were neighbors at Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y. Wagner said he told Burgman he and Frank were acquaintances."

Frank, onetime chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, is now a judge on the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit at New York.

The German underground "mission" which Wagner said he came to this country to carry out was not mentioned during the trial. Quite the contrary, Laughlin asked the witness at one point:

"During the years preceding the war were you not doing espionage work for Germany in the United States?"

Wagner responded with a flat "no."

Wagner gave up his American citizenship voluntarily in 1940 and therefore is not subject to prosecution for his broadcasting activities during the war.

St. Louis, Oct. 13 (AP)—Robert E. Hannegan left his entire estate to members of his immediate family under terms of a will filed today in Probate Court. The former Postmaster General and recent president of the St. Louis Cardinals died last Thursday.

No estimate on the value of the estate was available, but Hannegan's sale of his interest in the baseball club last January was said to have brought him about one million dollars.

'Barnacular' Suggested Name For Fancy Talk

Perth, Scotland, Oct. 13 (AP). Author-journalist Ivor Brown has a word for all that fancy, modern lingo you read nowadays.

He calls it "barnacular." And he says those $10 words are clinging like parasite barnacles to the vernacular, the plain old language most people speak every day.

"No one is ever 'ill' nowadays," he told a meeting of librarians here. "He is 'maladjusted.' A 'bad boy' is a 'juvenile delinquent.'

"If a man calls food 'food,' he may appear to be a simple fellow, but if he can write a memo about 'units of nutritional intake,' he is regarded as indispensable and may even get a raise in salary.

"No one is 'poor.' Instead he is 'underprivileged.'

"We have 'wonder girls,' 'glamour girls' and 'swim suits.' Blonde girls always appear in court. Brunettes either stay innocent outside, or the color of their hair is never mentioned."

Australian General Calls War Inevitable

Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Vernon Sturdee, chief of the Australian General Staff, today said a third world war between Russia and the West was inevitable.

The atom bomb "cannot stop an army," he told a luncheon of the Royal Empire Society.

"I see no possibility of a third world war being averted," Sturdee said. "It may not be for years, but it will come."

'Hill' Asked to Help Form Union of West

Owen J. Roberts, former Supreme Court justice, yesterday asked Congress to help form a union of western democracies to "win the cold war" and "stop World War III."

He appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee as president of the Atlantic Union Committee. This group is supporting resolutions in Congress which would direct President Truman to invite the Atlantic nations to send delegates to a "constitutional convention."

Roberts said the proposal is comparable to the actions taken by the American colonies when they split off from England and set up the United States.

Convening such a federal convention now, he said, would "stop the Russians dead in their tracks." without finally committing the United States to an international union.

"The conclusions reached in convention," Roberts pointed out, "would have to be ratified by Congress and by the American people. When the convention adjourns, the time for our judgment, debate and action will have arrived."

Of Dubious Value, He Says

The former justice said that alliances such as the Atlantic Pact "are of dubious value," except "as a first step toward true federation." He characterized the Atlantic treaty as an agreement which has the United States "underwriting 11 foreign policies over which we have no control whatsoever."

On the other hand, he said, passage of the Atlantic Union resolution would lessen the chances of a shooting war and could "win the cold one."

"The way to stop World War III," he emphasized, "is for the peace-loving nations, the democracies who have not fought an aggressive war in the last two generations, to join forces so that no aggressor will dare attack us."

Would Make U. N. Federation

The president of the United World Federalists, Alan Cranston, of Palo Alto, Calif., told the committee it should approve another resolution which would put the United States behind a move to change the United Nations into a federation that could enforce peace by laws.

This resolution, backed by 105 House members, seeks to revise the U. N. Charter to provide for a world government created by law.

Another witness was Harrison Brown, a former assistant at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant, now connected with the Institute of Nuclear Studies at Chicago University.

He urged adoption of a system of world-wide law in order to control the atom bomb. The American Government and people, he said, "have grossly overestimated . . . the technological difficulties of manufacturing atomic weapons" and Russia may have an A-bomb stockpile in two to four years of "real strategic importance."

Representative Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.) said the Atlantic Union is a natural outgrowth of methods by which the United States was formed.

"The history of the United States since the establishment of the Constitution down to our times has been the extension of this foreign policy of federating with men instead of merely allying with states," he said.

Col. Alfred C. Oliver, wartime head of the Chaplains Corps in the Philippines and now retired, opposed the resolution on the grounds that "world government means the destruction of the sovereignty of the United States."

He said there never could be a world federation without Russian participation "and under present conditions Russia cannot be trusted to participate honestly in such a government."

Omar B. Ketchum, national legislative director of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, also opposed any surrender of national sovereignty in a world federation and said:

"If the people of the world earnestly desire peace we will have peace. If some insist on war, they will have war. World government is not the answer and the price is too high for this Nation to pay."

Red Troops At Canton

China would be "adequately defended."

Canton is only 60 miles from the Chinese-British border of the leased territory of Kowloon and only 80 miles from Hongkong itself. Already Communist units were streaking for the Canton-Kowloon Railway.

Canton appeared calm during its last hours, but Communist underground cells began appearing in the open during the past week. By Thursday they openly threatened the police and local gendarmerie:

"Do not desert your posts. Keep the city under control. We will be watching."

Far Quieter Than Shanghai

The last days of Canton were far quieter than those of Shanghai where there were widespread execution of Communist underground agents by Nationalist troops.

However, a United Press correspondent leaving Canton Thursday reported seeing the bodies of seven blackclad Chinese by the side of the road, victims of a firing squad.

The occupation also appeared to be quieter than that of Nanking where daylong looting took place.

Chungking, to which most of the government was fleeing, was the wartime capital of China.

Even Chungking did not appear safe, however, for three separate Communist armies are poised for attacks on the rich province of Szechuan in which it is located.

The main body of Nationalist troops escaped successfully to Kwangsi province.

Violent Turn Feared in Feud

Greece?" is the question most frequently asked by Yugoslavs of Americans with whom they come in contact professionally or socially.

It is a question to which Washington, more specifically the National Military Establishment, should find an answer at the earliest possible moment.

This is because it becomes abundantly clear that the Russo-Yugoslav clash transcends the limits of what had been merely a Communist dogfight and enters the realm of the West's ability to defend itself successfully in possible war with the East.

The far-reaching nature of the dispute has been recognized at the political level. The State Department could not help but welcome Yugoslav's defection from the Kremlin's satellite society. The Yugoslav's action might stimulate a welcome trend.

Swift Aid Significant

The necessity for bolstering Yugoslavia economically was recognized by the speed with which America hastened to lend this now largely isolated country 20 million dollars through the Export-Import Bank and finance a much needed three-million-dollar steel mill.

But at the military level, no indication has been received here of a policy of support for Tito if and when the Yugoslav's territorial integrity is threatened by direct or indirect aggression.

The National Military Establishment is thought here to be inclined to regard Russo-Yugoslav conflict as a remote intramural Communist affair, an attitude which might prove costly should the Soviet Union undertake to achieve by violent means what it failed to do with such weapons as it has used thus far.

There is no doubt among competent Yugoslav observers here that the Soviet Union would attack if Moscow thought it could get away with it. The suppression of Titoism has become an urgent problem of prestige to the Kremlin.

Such attack might never come were it clear to Moscow that the United States was ready to supply arms and munitions to Tito in such an eventuality. But should Russia attack successfully, the West would find itself with Soviet troops on the frontiers of Trieste and constituting a physical threat to Italy and the moral opposition to communism in that country.

It is unlikely in the event of attack that Tito would even attempt to defend the northern lowlands and the Valleys of Sava and the Danube. He would retire to the familiar mountains of his partisan days and fight on from there as long as his 30-odd divisions could hold.

But it is not necessary for the Soviets to invade Yugoslavia to create a strategic and political situation injurious to the West. Good-sized guerilla warfare, employing satellite Cominformists, would prove sufficient for its purposes if sustained over a long period.

Unless supplied with arms, Tito could not maintain such a struggle indefinitely. His government could eventually be overthrown. What would take its place? A Cominformist government which would be a puppet of Kremlin, probably more subservient, if that were possible, than those now in Hungary or Romania.

That, of course, is assuming that a prolonged struggle in Yugoslavia at this stage of West-East relations might not set off a new world war.

The only comforting thought in the whole dismal prospect is the knowledge that Tito and his Yugoslavs will fight if attacked no matter where aggression originates or how.

The quarrel between Yugoslavia and Russia is irreconcilable. Yugoslavia is determined to build its socialist state in its own way without interference in its internal affairs or dictation in its foreign relations.

Licenses Issued Show $100,867 Revenue Rise

Licenses issued here in the year ended June 30 produced $100,867 more revenue than those of the previous year, District Superintendent of Licenses Chatham T. Nottingham announced yesterday.

During the past year, Nottingham's office issued 43,697 licenses which brought in $972,132. In addition, 389 applications were disapproved. Most disapprovals, he said, led to criminal proceedings against persons found to be operating without licenses.

Czechoslovak Ministeries Being Purged

Prague, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Communist Party press said tonight the Czechoslovak government is housecleaning its ministries in a growing purge of political unreliables.

This purge concurred with a continuing police roundup of thousands of small businessmen and other persons considered unfriendly to the Communist-led government.

[The government tonight added "incurably reactionary" Catholic priests to the list of those being sent to Czech labor camps, informed sources told the United Press.

[The arrests and beatings of priests were reported from Pilsen and Ceske Budejovice in Bohemia.]

The newspaper Rude Pravo said firings and transfers were planned to "cut down on bureaucratic red tape." It reported 92 employes will soon leave the Ministry of Industry and that 100 others will be transferred to "productive" fields. Similar action is being taken in the Finance Ministry, it said.

The Prague radio said that Parliament, convening Friday, will speedily enact the government's church control bill.

Reliable sources said ranking members of the Ministry of Agriculture were at odds over the collectivization of farm lands.

Rome, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Actress Ingrid Bergman announced today she will stay in Italy until her divorce is granted and will make no pictures before then.

Bulgaria Stirs Ancient Hates, Belgrade Says

Belgrade, Oct. 13 (AP).—Yugoslavia today accused pro-Moscow Bulgarians of blasting the dream of uniting south Slav countries into one federation.

In a sharp note to Bulgaria, Yugoslavia charged her with attempting to revive historic hatreds in that part of the world by repudiating her treaty of friendship with Yugoslavia.

In signing the pact with Tito in 1947, the late Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov, declared that ancient wounds soon would be healed when the two countries joined to make a united Macedonia.

Macedonia now is divided among Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece.

For this statement, Dimitrov was slapped down by the Moscow newspaper Pravda. He renounced the idea just before the Tito-Cominform split in 1948.

West Germans Seek Foreign Office Setup

Bonn, Germany, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—The West German government will ask the Allies to permit formation of a full-fledged Garman foreign office, official German quarters said today.

The source said the request to the three Western powers will point out that the Soviet-backed cabinet in East Germany includes a foreign minister.

West German quarters said this gave the east zone government a "considerable advantage" over the Bonn cabinet since the 45 million Germans west of the Iron Curtain still are represented abroad by the Allies.

Action on the request would necessitate a revision of the Allied occupation statute earlier than September, 1950. The statute provides that it shall not be revised before then.

Paris 'New Look' For Men Adopts Neckline Plunge

Paris, Oct. 13 (AP).—The new look for men has been unv iled in Paris, plunging purple neckline and all.

Gaston Waltener, tailor, believes man is in a state of "vestimentary inferiority," and yesterday showed what he would do about it.

Before 500 spectators, four young men from the Conservatory of Dramatic Arts walked about to display such ensembles as:

Denfeld Charges Pentagon Campaign to Reduce Navy to Anti-Submarine Force

events in the inner councils of the Pentagon in which he took part. And he bolstered his charges that the Navy is being unfairly treated with a "bill of particulars."

The latter made it plain that those he was criticizing for "arbitrary" actions were Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Denfeld's colleagues on the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

While crediting Navy detractors in the Pentagon with "sincerity," Denfeld declared that many top chiefs lack understanding of the role of naval power and believe in the "erroneous principle of the self-sufficiency of air power."

Cates Last Witness

Yesterday's session concluded the Navy's presentation of its "case," except one witness to be heard Monday morning—Marine Commandant C. B. Cates. After that Johnson and Air Force and Army chiefs will be heard in rebuttal. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Joint Chiefs chairman, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, and Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington, are expected to testify.

Admiral Nimitz yesterday joined the parade of top Navy leaders—active and retired—who have been criticizing current Department of Defense war policies and plans this week. A statement from the wartime Pacific commander was read to the committee questioning the atomic bomb as "an efficient weapon of war."

"Area" strategic bombing, said Nimitz, seems to him a "costly, wasteful and unsure method of reaching the enemy vitals." The A-bomb, he declared, is "the most terrible weapon of great destruction ever conceived" but it is still a "two-edged" sword.

Adm. Raymond A. Spruance, retired, wartime commander of the Fifth Fleet, also testified yesterday. Like Nimitz, he confined himself largely to a discussion of the broader aspects of national security rather than going into the current row.

Is "Very Skeptical"

But, outlining his ideas for fighting Russia if need be, Spruance declared himself "very skeptical" as to how close to the target bombs from high-altitude intercontinental bombers would hit. Air power is very potent, he declared, but we should launch it from and keep our front-lines "on the enemy's continent." It would be a long war, Spruance warned.

He questioned whether the United States, as a "matter of national policy," should A-bomb Soviet cities, and declared we should use all means to wean the Russian people from their leaders.

President Truman declined to discuss the question of the "morality" of atomic bombing of civil populations. He also was asked about the potentialities of A-bombs and the statement of a Navy commander that you could stand at one end of the Washington Airport runway and not be serously hurt by a bomb exploding at the other.

Never on Receiving End

The President's reply—that he'd never been on the receiving end of an A-bomb and hence couldn't comment personally on its effective distance—drew a laugh from reporters.

Are the admirals and generals dictating defense policy or is it up to the Commander in Chief, another reporter asked. Mr. Truman replied that the Commander in Chief and civilian secretaries establish policy on the advice of the Chiefs of Staff.

Admiral Denfeld began his testimony with the statement that he "fully" supported the statements made by the two dozen other naval and Marine officers who have criticized the Pentagon policy. He declared that he "could not overemphasize the fact that the naval service is not motivated by a selfish desire for survival" in its protests.

"We are not fighting for anything more, anything less, than the means to do our full share in protecting our country from—or in—total war," the Chief of Naval Operations said.

Subscribes to Act

The Navy, he went on, subscribes to the Unification Act and the spirit and concept of it.

ADMIRAL LOUIS DENFELD
Ponders a question

"We maintain that those principles and objectives are not being realized and will not be achieved unless the Navy is admitted to full partnership," Denfeld said.

Citing "examples of improper unification," the admiral mentioned the cancellation of construction of the 65,000-ton aircraft carrier United States last spring. Building the flattop was approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, May 28, 1948, and by Defense Secretary James Forrestal, he said. General Vandenberg dissented.

Nearly a year later, after a "vigorous public campaign" against it, he said, Johnson asked the Joint Chiefs for their opinion of it. Gen. Omar Bradley then reversed himself, Denfeld said. As senior member of the JCS, the admiral said he had submitted the two adverse opinions and his own detailed recommendation for it to Johnson.

After Only 40 Minutes

"It was delivered to the Secretary of Defense at 10:20 a. m. April 23, 1949. Forty minutes later I was handed the already mimeographed press release of the cancellation order."

Other cases cited by Denfeld to show that the cards are stacked against them:

(1) He learned about the Air Force decision of last January to build more B-36 bombers through the newspapers, and "believes" Secretary Forrestal was not consulted either. Yet this was a major step in defense policy.

(2) The Navy was not asked for its views on the effects of cutting back its 1950 budget by 353 million dollars. Yet this cut, which some Defense officials say is still "tentative," was "firm" on September 8, Denfeld said.

(3) Since passage of the 1947 Unification Act and signing of the Key West agreement, "persistent attempts" have been made to change the roles and missions of the armed services fixed therein. This activity on the part of Pentagon chiefs, he said, produces "instability."

(4) During the same period, "there have been many attempts" to curb the "assigned functions" of the Navy and Marine Corps by "interpretation of language," reduction of authorized strengths and changing jobs assigned to the Navy to joint functions.

"It is significant that most of these attempts at changes are directed at naval aviation or the Marine Corps and its support air," Denfeld added.

(5) Despite the provisions of the Unification Act guaranteeing maintenance of the combatant functions of the Marine Corps and Naval Aviation, "it is true that a proposal (to take amphibious warfare away from the Marines) has been initiated."

And in spite of this law and "public utterances from our sister services that there shall be naval aviation and a Marine Corps, in the councils of the Department of Defense the opposite view is often evident," Denfeld added.

If the money to sustain naval aviation and the Marines is choked off, he went on, "or the composition of the Navy is determined by a 2-to-1 vote regardless of funds available, then naval aviation and the Marines will be put out of business as surely as if there had been no law."

Denfeld declared he was not protesting budget reductions as such—for "we realize the necessity for true economy." He added:

"Our concern is with arbitrary reductions that impair, or even eliminate, essential naval functions. It is not so much a question of too little appropriated money, but how we are allowed to invest that money . . .

"Limitations are imposed without consultation, and without understanding of the Navy's responsibility in defense of our maritime nation."

Denying that the Navy seeks to destroy unification, Denfeld said the root of the trouble was the refusal of Pentagon chiefs to give the sea service "full partnership" status.

"It is not a question of impaired morale," he stated. "The entire issue is the Navy's deep apprehension for the security of the United States. This apprehension arises from the trend to arrest and diminish the Navy's ability to meet its responsibilities."

Unification, the Navy chief declared, should be basically "a coordination of effort." "It does not mean merger, absorption, or elimination" or that "two services can control a third." There have been many instances of the latter, he added.

Referring to the charges that the Navy has harmed the national security in publicly presenting its protests, Denfeld declared:

"I can understand the view that it is regrettable the basic differences revealed in these hearings have been aired in public. I believe, however, it would have been immeasurably more regrettable had these issues remained hidden and a false sense of security been permitted to prevail."

This is so, he added:

Because, the issues are so "vital to our national security."

Because, "improper operation of unification" under the present Pentagon regime "is more injurious than no unification at all."

Because, "under our system of Government, it is the people who are the final judges of the stewardship of Government officals."

His last statement left little doubt but that the embattled Navy admirals look to the country rather than their present superiors to change things.

Further, in presenting a six-proposal plan for remedying what they consider wrong, Denfeld specifically did not criticize Congress or the unification law. The fault, he said, is that the law "has not yet begun to function as the Congress intended."

Here is what the Navy proposes should be done:

1. Speed up the report of the Weapons System Evaluation Group on the B-36 to determine its military worth.

2. "Literally" support the Unification Act and Key West agreement on roles and missions of the armed forces.

3. Support the principle that each service, within budgetary limitations, be permitted to design and develop its own weapons. (But not put them into mass production without top approval.)

4. "Provide the Navy adequate and appropriate representation in key positions within the Department of Defense."

5. Limit the scope of activities of the Joint Chiefs to those specifically mentioned in the Unification Act. (Principally to exercise "strategic" but not "operation" control).

6. In the present stage of unification, "the views of a particular service are entitled to predominant weight in the determination of the forces needed by that service to fulfill its missions."

"The accomplishment of these points," Denfeld concluded, "will not in itself solve all our national security problems. It will, however, go far toward providing a framework which will permit a unified approach to the grave problems of national security.

"We must get on with these problems for in their solution lies the whole hope of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—not only for this great country but for the entire world. The time is now!"

Earlier, the chief of naval operations declared he considered air power the dominant factor in war. But strategic air warfare is not a monopoly of the Air Force, he said.

Two "vital" questions must be decided, however, before the effectiveness of strategic bombing can be evaluated, Denfeld declared. First, is whether it can be successfully accomplished, with the B-36 or other weapons. This question was turned over to the Weapons System Evaluation Group and is the main reason the group was created, he said.

The Second Question

The second question is: assuming successful delivery, what will be its effect on an enemy, physically and psychologically? The latter problem—assuming 100 percent success of an atomic bomb attack—was considered by a special joint board which reported in July, Denfeld disclosed.

The Harmon Board report, which is top secret, was unanimous and received the backing of all of the joint chiefs, it was said.

Procurement of the B-36 in quantity "should follow rather than precede" these evaluation tests, he said, adding that the Air Force action was "illogical, damaging and dangerous."

Calls Argument Unsound

The Navy chief declared that the "steady campaign" to cut the sea service down to a convoy and anti-submarine force is based on the argument that no probable enemy has a surface fleet.

"Sincere but inexperienced persons, military and civilian, advance these unsound arguments," he added.

Then he gave the committee a detailed explanation of the role of sea power. Throughout history, Denfeld argued fleets have opposed fleets, not as an end in itself, but to gain control of the sea and carry the fight to the enemy's homeland. Thus, we used naval power successfully to win Okinawa, after the Jap Fleet was destroyed. And it was the Navy's toughest and most costly battle of the war.

Subs Chief Naval Threat

Russian submarines present the chief naval threat today just as Germany's U-boats did, Denfeld went on. Naval air power, through carrier task forces and other forces, can whip the submarine if maintained at proper strength, he said. And the best way is through hitting their bases rather than running them down at sea. Urging that America retain and exploit its monopoly of carrier air power, Denfield said:

"The situation is, however, that this most important instrument of modern warfare is so little comprehended by the other services that the Air Force has argued for its complete elimination, while the Army has recommended its serious reduction."

Before yesterday's meeting, Secretary Johnson called on Vinson, apparently to discuss his rebuttal case. First witness of the day was Rear Admiral Luis deFlorez, USNR, a consulting engineer. He urged testing both the supercarrier and big intercontinental bombers, as our only safe course is to "spread our bets."

Meanwhile, in New Orleans Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) says Louis Johnson was appointed Defense Secretary as "a political payoff" and that Johnson is making every effort to scuttle the Navy.

Hebert, before the first District American Legion luncheon, said "When Louis Johnson became secretary, as a political payoff, there's where the trouble began."

'Woolly Bears' Forecast Second Mild Winter

(Woolly) Bear Mountain, N. Y., Oct. 13 (NYHT).—The second annual woolly bear survey conducted by naturalists during the last two days indicates that, if the ancient superstition that these black and brown caterpillars can forecast the weather has any basis in fact, this section of the country is due for another extremely mild winter.

As a result of last year's survey the woolly bears' prediction was "extremely mild." The winter turned out to be exactly that.

Crittenberger Heads U. N. Military Unit

Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger has been named chairman of the United States delegation of the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations.

It is the first time the group has had a chairman. As such, Crittenberger will represent the President, Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the military activities of the United States degelation.

Crittenberger has been the senior U. S. Army member of the Military Staff Committee since June, 1948.

Stalin Reported A-Blast Witness

Aggression Curb

Probe Report Lauds Work Done by AEC

The congressional report clearing the Atomic Energy Commission of charges of "ncredible mismanagement" declares that that agency has created a "formidable deterrent against aggression."

The report was made public yesterday, after having been adopted in a party-line vote, 10 to 6, by the members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

The report analyzed a long investigation of charges made against the AEC and its chairman, David E. Lilienthal, by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa). It found those charges paradoxical, naive and unproved.

Hickenlooper, meantime, has branded the majority report a "whitewash" and has promised to produce a minority report which will be backed by Republican members of the committee.

The majority report, however, takes up Hickenlooper's charges one by one and comes to a highly complimentary conclusion for the AEC. It has no criticism to make of the AEC's security policy, which it finds elaborate and extensive, but nevertheless striking a balance to permit maximum scientific achievement.

"No mobilization of guards, vaults, and fences could ever protect us so well," the report concludes, "as the powerfully deterring American stockpile of bombs) which the AEC has striven to accumulate."

There is no evidence from the long investigation, the report says, even "hinting" that Russia obtained secrets from the AEC that advanced its progress toward an atomic explosion by so much as one day.

The report finds it paradoxical that the charge of "incredible mismanagement" was made, as well as those of "misplaced emphasis," "maladministration," "fiascos," "waste," and "equivocation," and yet the accusers concede that the results of the AEC's work have been good.

Only once, the report goes on, did the Military Liaison Committee, completely informed of the AEC's work, exercise its right to appeal to the President over an act of commission or omission by the AEC. The controversy was on the question whether the AEC or the armed forces should have access to the atom bombs produced. Mr. Truman decided to keep custody in the AEC.

There was not one case to sustain the charge that the AEC employs on atomic projects persons who have strong Communist leanings, the report says. The only qualification is "a handful of 'calculated risk' cases", in which "a combination of irreplaceable ability, access to key secrets during the war, and derogatory data limited mainly to associations may mean that a scientist gains clearance where normally it would be denied."

The majority indorsed the AEC's policy of distributing radioactive isotopes to foreign research bodies, but mentioned that the law may be ambiguous on the point with respect to future decisions. Accordingly, the committee said it was considering a clarifying amendment.

It found no case of violation of the McMahon (Atomic Energy) Act.

The report's criticism of the AEC was relatively mild. It doubted whether it had shown enough "aggressiveness" in getting rid of the business of running the various communities around the principal atomic establishments.

It complained also of "kinks" in relationships between the AEC and its many—about 1000—contractors and subcontractors. It was "overslow" in progress on developing reactors (atomic piles) for military purposes, "notwithstanding the many good reasons" that accounted for the lack of speed.

By Yves Delbars

Diplomatic Correspondent Paris Presse (Copyright 1949 by United Press and Yves Delbars)

Paris, Oct. 13.—The first atomic explosion in Russia occurred in the Ust-Urt desert July 10, 1949, with Generalissimo Josef Stalin an eyewitness, and Russia does not yet have a stockpile of atomic bombs, Maj. Boris Silov, a former officer in the Soviet army, told me before sailing for South America.

It was Silov who told me last July that Russia did have the atomic bomb—a dispatch that was published in the July 30 issue of Samedi Soir.

Silov and two companions said they left eastern Germany in June after deciding to join Silov's relatives in South America.

"We were just tired of the continual nervous tension and great fatigue caused by the constant feeling of insecurity that results from the severity of penalties which constantly menace those who hold high positions," Silov said.

Silov said the first explosion took place July 10, 1949. It was a matter of verifying and bringing to a head the first "normal" prototype of the atomic bomb. This prototype, to which was given the name molnia (lightning), gave satisfying results. During the week that followed this explosion experiments were made with two other prototypes furnished with what can be called "dispositive delay detonator." This was declared efficient for a period of from three to five days.

These explosions took place in the southeastern extremity of the Ust-Urt desert east of the Caspian Sea in the Soviet republics of Kazakh and Uzbek, where there exists a "zapoviednik" (forbidden reservation) a hexagon of 60,000 square kilometers (23,166 square miles).

Stalin insisted on being present in spite of the long trip by railroad. He never takes a plane anymore. Several members of the Politburo were present, notably L. P. Beria, K. E. Voroshilov, A. I. Mikoyan and Nikolai Bulganin.

The experiment was directed by the vice president of the Atomic Research Commission, Prof. Abram Federovitch Joffe. He was assisted by Vavilov, Khlovine, Frenkel Soubotine, Skobeltzyne, Zaitzev. There were also several German scholars, among them Gustav Hertz, nephew of Heinrich Michelberg; Alfred Schmitt and Baron Manfred von Ardenne.

There is no stockpile because they could only start manufacturing after the experiments of July.

There exist in Russia two different explosive atomic mixtures destined to the manufacture of the bomb. Both were tried in July, 1949. They are:

A. "Normal mixture," uranium 235 plus plutonium.

B. "Auxiliary mixture," thorium plus brevium.

The reserves of uranium that the USSR possesses constitute less than a third of those which the Anglo-Saxon countries have. But the USSR possesses the most important reserves of thorium in the world.

At the time of the July experiments two "mixtures" were verified.

For "normal" bombs (uranium plus plutonium) the USSR should not be able to produce annually more than 20 to 30 bombs. As far as the thorium plus brevium bombs are concerned, production could reach 150 bombs, but these are much less powerful than the other ones.

A bomb with a hydrogen base using cosmic rays has been rumored but the USSR does not have any bomb of this kind. Professor Abram Federovitch Joffe, the great specialist of research on cosmic rays, organized a number of studies and experiments in this direction in the Caucasus and in Pamir. He concluded it was impossible at present to provoke "a nuclear reaction of Bothe."

("A nuclear reaction of Bothe" apparently refers to a nuclear theory discovered by Walter Bothe, professor of physics at Heidelberg University.)

This refers to a "helio-atomic" bomb, which is supposed through the energy of cosmic rays, to turn hydrogen into helium. He concluded that all the heat necessary to put this reaction into operation could not be obtained on the earth, even with recourse to an explosion of a uranium bomb. On the other hand, the Bothe cycle can be obtaineed partially and used for industrial purposes.

The United States got confirmation of the explosion of the bomb of July, 1949, through people who had left the USSR.

Silov said he thinks the planes counter-espionage had noticed several times the appearance of unknown airplanes flying high over the regions that had "atomic" installations. They were able to establish that the planes came from the direction of the Iranian frontier, and that their passage followed very close all stages of the experiments.

Silov said he thinks the planes were American.

Carrier Takeoff Crash Kills Hero

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Comdr. James Joseph Southerland, 38, whom nine Jap bullets couldn't stop at Guadalcanal, crashed to his death last night in a takeoff from the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The 38-year-old Pacific hero's F4U Corsair went over the side after it was brushed by another aircraft in a routine night operation off Jacksonville, the Navy announced.

The pilot was shot down over Guadalcanal but despite nine bullet wounds and shrapnel injuries, made his way through enemy jungle to friendly natives who helped him to safety.

Bruce Confirmed by Senate As Military Aid Director

The Senate last night, without objection, confirmed James Bruce of Maryland as director of the foreign military assistance program.

Members of the House Appropriations Committee said they will recommend House passage of the full $1,314,010,000 asked by President Truman for the foreign arms program.

An Appropriations subcommittee already has approved the arms fund and the full committee has scheduled a meeting this morning to consider it.

The money is included in a catch-all appropriation bill slated for House action later today.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, meanwhile, has held special hearings on the bill in an effort to speed it through before Congress adjourns.

The arms program—to provide cash and contract authority for rearming friendly nations around the world whose security is threatened by communism—already has been authorized by overwhelming majorities in both houses.

The State and Defense Departments urged the Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday to approve the entire $1,314,010,000 program without delay.

Undersecretary of State Webb told the group the Atlantic Council and Defense Committee set up under the Atlantic Pact will have defense plans completed within 60 days.

British Plan to Ease Controls On Trade Behind Iron Curtain

London, Oct. 13 (AP).—Britain is planning to loosen control over trade with certain East European countries in a bid to boost business with the non-dollar world.

This information came today from responsible diplomats who reported at the same time negotiations for a British-Russian trade pact virtually have collapsed.

Britain's trading with Russia will continue on a contract basis only, they said.

The British Board of Trade October 5 opened the way for private traders to import a long list of food, machinery and raw material items from most West European and Commonwealth countries.

The informants said the British since then have suggested to the Poles that these trade liberalization agreements be extended on a reciprocal basis to take in their two countries. Britain has a big trade pact with Poland.

The Board of Trade, according to these informants, is believed ready to loosen restrictions on business also with Czechoslovakia, Hungary and other countries in Russia's sphere of influence.

Stalin Asks For German Cooperation

Berlin (Friday), Oct. 14 (AP).—Prime Minister Stalin made a strong bid today for Russian-German cooperation which he said could make peace in Europe secure.

He said that the German and Soviet peoples made the largest sacrifice in the war and that "both these peoples have the largest potentialities in Europe to complete great actions of world significance.

In a congratulatory message to the leaders of the East German republic, Stalin hailed the birth of the Soviet-sponsored regime as a "turning point in th history of Europe."

His statement was distributed here by ADN, the official Soviet News Agency.

ADN said Stalin's message was addressed to President Wilhelm Pieck and Chancellor (Prime Minister) Otto Grotewohl of East Germany.

"There is no doubt that the existence of a peaceloving, Democratic Germany, along with the existence of a peaceloving Soviet Union, excludes the possibility of new wars in Europe, makes an end to European bloodshed, and makes impossible the servitude of European countries under world imperialists," Stalin said.

"If both these peoples (USSR and Germany) will show the same determination to fight with the same intensity of effort for peace with which they waged war, then peace in Europe can be regarded as secure. If you (Pieck and Grotewohl) will lay a cornerstone for a unified, democratic, peaceloving Germany, you will at the same time achieve a great work for all Europe by securing a firm peace . . .

"I wish you success on this new and glorious road. Long live and prosper the unified, independent, democratic, peace-loving Germany.

"J. Stalin."

Lilienthal Urges Easing Of Atom Energy Secrecy

New York, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, said tonight that news of Russia's atomic achievements means this country should stop the "senseless business of choking ourselves . . . by extremes of secrecy."

Lilienthal addressed the annual Freedom House dinner where he and Gen. Lucius D. Clay received the 1949 Freedom Awards.

Lilienthal called for maintenance of this country's "great strength in weapon development" until international control of atomic energy can be set up and declared that the United States already has a "considerable" stockpile of improved atomic weapons.

He applauded President Truman's decision to tell the American people about Russia's atomic achievements and said it "demonstrated to the whole world that to prevail against the totalitarians we need not imitate them."

He said he believed the people of the Nation should have the essential facts on atomic energy "right from the shoulder and without any 'papa-knows-best' nonsense."

Attlee Announces There'll Be No General Election in 1949

London, Oct. 13 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee put a stop today to Britain's big political guessing game by announcing there will be no general election in 1949.

The announcement came as a neatly timed wet blanket smack in the middle of the three-day annual rally of the Conservative Party, the major opposition to Attlee's Labor government.

Winston Churchill and other Conservative leaders had called for an early vote as a test of the government's economic policies.

Churchill, however, did not give up. He told the London Conservative organization tonight:

"We are quite indifferent to the date of the election so long as we are not taken by surprise and are ready for it in every way. From a national point of view, the sooner the election the better A continuance of the present uncertainty and friction can only be an impediment to national revival."

Attlee issued a formel statement after the first meeting of his full Cabinet since the Government slashed the pound from $4.03 to $2.80 September 18:

"Having regard to disturbing effects on trade and industry and on the general effort by the continuance of speculation as to an early general election, the Prime Minister thinks it right to inform the country of his decision not to advise his majesty to dissolve Parliament this year."

The decision means that the Labor government will stay in the saddle until spring, at least, and possibly to the end of its full five-year term in July.

Attlee is believed to have felt devaluation will be accepted in the end as a good thing by cheapening the prices of British goods and thus giving exports a shot in the arm.

Also, the Labor Party promised in the 1945 campaign that it would bring about state ownership of the iron and steel industry. It can complete action on that bill early next year.

Executive Pay Bill Compromise Passed by House

The compromise executive pay bill raising the salaries of Cabinet members by $7500 a year was approved yesterday by the House, and returned to the Senate.

The measure also gives pay boosts to about 200 other Government officials and Presidential aids.

Both chambers previously had passed it in different form.

The compromise split the differences between the Senate and the House in most cases.

COAL

what YOU want . . . is what WE want

Why does the country face another coal crisis?

Why are miners on strike?

Why should homes and industries and institutions be uncertain about getting the coal they need?

Why does the coal business have so many strikes, stoppages, memorial holidays, three-day weeks and no-day weeks?

The coal operators do not want these things. Neither do you. Why should we have them?

Is it wages?

Coal miners' average hourly earnings have more than doubled . . . their weekly earnings have tripled . . . in the last ten years. Their weekly take-home pay, until the union first decreed a 3-day week and then a no-day work week, was the highest of any major industry. Does it make sense that the country should be in another coal crisis because of wages?

Is it working hours?

A reduction in hours worked for the same wage means less coal produced for the same pay. This is a wage increase in another form. The agreement which has now expired provided for a 5-day week, and an 8-hour day. This 8-hour day included travel time and a 30-minute lunch period—time paid for but not worked. In the underground mines, which account for 70 per cent of total production, travel time averages at least one hour. This means productive work time of 6½ hours a day—a 33-hour week. Does it make sense that there should be another coal crisis because of working hours?

Is it "welfare"—pensions, insurance, etc?

Under the contract recently expired a welfare royalty of 20 cents per ton on every ton of coal mined was paid into a welfare fund for the union members. This payment is equivalent to about 17 cents per hour per man—as compared with 10 cents per hour recommended for welfare by the government's fact-finding board set up for another industry.

Does it make sense that there should be another coal crisis because of welfare payments?

A tonnage tax on coal to support a union welfare fund was forced on the operators in a contract negotiated with the union by the Secretary of the Interior in June, 1946, before giving the mines back to their owners. It was 5 cents a ton, then on the next contract renewal it was 10 cents, then—a year ago—raised to 20 cents a ton.

By any yardstick, government fact-finding report or other, coal miners are already better off today than any other industrial workers in the United States. Better off in wages . . . better off in hours of work . . . and better off in welfare payments contributed by the employer.

Why, then, another strike? Coal miners, coal companies, their stockholders, users of coal, the American people at large are the victims of a giant, coercive labor monopoly.

What the public wants and what coal operators want are the same. We want to operate our mines so that the public can be provided with the coal they want, when they want it and at a reasonable price.

Que Street Elms

It is very good news that the Highway Department has figured out a way to ease the traffic problem where Q st. intersects Wisconsin ave. without cutting down any of Q st.'s magnificent elms. Engineer of Streets Samuel Harrison deserves commendation for devising a satisfactory alternative. But a good deal of credit is due also to the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association which protested against the initial proposal and insisted that an alternative be found. The association's public-spirited intervention has saved this community from the needless impairment of a street that is one of its great ornaments. The fact that only three trees were involved in this instance does not at all diminish the significance of the service. It will set an excellent example for similar expedients in the future.

Neutralizing The Atom

The question to be faced on international control of the A-bomb is whether the American objective of neutralizing the atom and freeing mankind from fear of its destructive potentialities can be accomplished by means alternative to those which the Russians have hitherto rejected.

The crux of the American proposal, the Baruch Plan, lay in its insistence that ownership of all fissionable material and management of all atomic energy production be vested in a supranational Atomic Development Authority to be created by the United Nations. A mere system of international inspection, to which the Russians professed themselves willing to submit, did not seem to this country to afford adequate protection.

Inspection would be an almost impossible job with atomic energy production under separate national auspices. It would entail, to be at all effective, a constant check upon mining operations, stocks of fissionable material, the utilization of atomic facilities to be sure that they were not being used to produce weapons. And since the conversion of atomic power, once produced, from peaceful to warlike purposes could be accomplished very quickly, inspection alone could not guarantee international security. Only a full relinquishment of national sovereignty over atomic energy could afford a real sense of safety from atomic aggression.

The Russian objection to the American plan of an international atomic development authority, stemmed, as Andrei Gromyko stated it in the Security Council in March, 1947, from fear that it would mean "unlimited interference . . . in the economic life of the countries on whose territories this control will be carried out, and interference in their internal affairs." Since this is a rational and understandable fear on the part of the Russians, one of the tasks of statesmanship should be to devise ways—modifications of the American plan, if necessary—to guarantee that the proposed ADA would promote and not inhibit their peaceful utilization of atomic energy.

Now that the Russians presumably have an atomic bomb, moreover, the problem has reached a crisis stage. Some of the delegates to the United Nations are reportedly pressing for some immediate and limited agreement to prohibit use of the bomb for aggressive purposes. Considering the inevitable involvement of the rest of the world in any atomic war, the United States cannot ignore such expedients simply because they do not realize in full this country's ideal of permanent international control. But neither can the United States afford without compensatory guarantees to deny itself the use of a weapon in which it still, no doubt, possesses qualitative and quantitative supremacy and on which the whole free world must rely to offset the mammoth Russian land forces. The suggestion that atomic bomb production remain uncurtailed but that the use of atomic bombs be forbidden except against an aggressor so designated by the U. N. is less susceptible to objection.

The proposal made at Lake Success on Tuesday by the Soviet representative, Jacob A. Malik, that all member nations of the U. N. disclose full information on their conventional armaments and atomic weapons alike must be viewed in this context. It is difficult to see, however, how it could contribute to the diminution of anxiety. For, as Warren R. Austin, the American representative, promptly pointed out, "A census of weapons without verification is meaningless." Verification itself could be made meaningful only by rigid, extensive and continuing inspection. And even so it would not meet the American objection to the Russian atomic control proposal of two years ago. The Post has long advocated disclosure of the size of the American atomic stockpile as an independent domestic measure designed to take the American people into the confidence of their Government. But we have never supposed that it could be counted on to promote a sense of international security.

In any case the quest for an enduring settlement must continue, even though there is a lack of good faith in Russo-American relations, for such a quest is necessary if only for the record. A settlement necessarily means a settlement in which no nation will have the means to wage atomic war. It is time, perhaps, to replace the now defunct International Atomic Energy Commission with some new U. N. mechanism capable of making a fresh start in this quest.

Guarantee Or Gift?

Although the Senate deserves considerable credit for upholding the principle of flexible farm price supports, the victory may turn out to be academic. The gimmick lies in the section of the Anderson bill continuing 90 percent of parity supports on so-called basic crops for a year before inaugurating the 75-90 percent sliding scale. A similar delay was provided in the Hope portion of the Hope-Aiken law passed by the last Congress; and as a result the variable supports set by Senator Aiken have never gone into effect. The danger is that the postponement in the Anderson bill may afford merely another excuse for evading the issue.

Nevertheless, the Anderson bill is infinitely preferable to the House-passed Gore bill, which would merely extend mandatory 90 percent supports over a wide range of commodities, for another year. We hope, therefore, that Senate conferees will hold out for the Anderson bill. For if no agreement should result, or if a compromise version should incur a presidential veto, the Aiken law would go into operation—and this is basically similar to the Anderson bill.

President Truman's own part in the price support battle has been curious indeed. Presumably his attitude is exemplified by Vice President Barkley's insistence on rigid 90 percent schedules. Yet the President's Council of Economic Advisers has urged flexible supports, as did the 1948 Democratic platform in so many words. And Mr. Truman has equivocated on the meaning of "flexible" to justify his advocacy of the Brannan Plan. This plan makes what in our opinion is a superficial play to consumers by promising them lower food prices in return for direct governmental income payments to farmers. What the Republicans who have refused to budge from 90 percent supports apparently have not realized is that they are abetting the appeal of this guaranteed income scheme by their defense of the current costly and wasteful program.

Eggs furnish an example of the idiocy of rigid supports. Price supports are not altogether responsible for the high price of eggs in Washington; the eggs sold here are of a higher quality than those being purchased by the Government in the Middle West. The fact remains, however, that the Commodity Credit Corporation, acting under the Hope portion of the Hope-Aiken law which requires 90 percent support, this year, is buying huge quantities of eggs when it does not know what to do with more than two billion eggs already on hand. The effect of this program is not only to encourage overproduction, but also to induce middlemen who fear a drop in prices to hold eggs off the market and let the Government buy them. A salient feature of the Anderson bill is that it would end this extortion by giving the Secretary of Agriculture immediate discretion to lower egg supports; a similar provision is in the Aiken law. But the Gore bill of the House would merely continue this indefensible mess. That alone is good reason for the Senate to stick to its position.

Executive Pay Bill

Despite the parsimonious inadequacy, the compromise executive pay bill agreed upon by Senate and House conferees will furnish a salutary lift to morale and efficiency in the Government service. In order to accommodate senatorial vanity, the more generous pay scales approved by the House for high-ranking executive employes had to be pared down. Nevertheless, the salaries of Cabinet members, agency chiefs, undersecretaries, assistant secretaries, commissioners and presidential aides will be raised from the absurd pitttances at which they have been for a quarter century to levels more nearly commensurate with the tremendous burdens and responsibilities entailed in these offices.

We believe that this salary increase, which will cost the Government not quite a million dollars, can be properly characterized an economy measure. It is likely to save for the public service in brains, ability, experience and devotion many times its monetary cost. It will eradicate galling inequities, which in numerous situations gave subordinates on the Federal payroll higher compensation than their superiors, and will thus promote coherence and rational distribution of authority. It will enhance the dignity of officials who must deal with businessmen much more liberally remunerated.

Men serve the United States Government, of course, for other considerations than money. High public office gives rewards in terms of power and perquisites and prestige, and no doubt these attract many men whose financial situation permits enjoyment of them. Many men are drawn into public office also through the excitement of participation in political reforms and social movements to which they are devoted. And a number, no doubt, serve for the sheer sake of service. Thus Government compensation is not to be compared on a strict dollar basis with the compensation offered by private industry. But if the Government is to retain in its important posts men who could command large salaries outside the Government, it must offer them at least the kind of monetary remuneration that will permit a fair standard of living for their families. Congress has at last taken a sensible step in this direction.

The Strike Issue

President Murray of the steelworkers' union says there can be no compromise in the opposition to workers' contributions to pensions and social insurance. The heads of the big steel companies are equally adamant in opposing a noncontributory system of payments. Consequently it will not be easy to find a way out of this impasse—an impasse on a matter of principle rather than dollars and cents. However, as The Washington Post pointed out in a recent editorial, an agreement providing for company contributions of 10 cents an hour, with the union consenting to share any future expenses in excess of that total, might afford a basis for a compromise settlement with the leading companies that would be acceptable to both parties.

The alternative to compromise can only be a long drawn out struggle between the industry and the union that will entail heavy losses for both sides as well as for the country at large. All men of goodwill will hope that such a test of endurance will be avoided. However, if Mr. Murray means what he says—that the union does not intend to budge from its demand that the companies bear all the costs of an insurance plan—we hope that it will lose its fight. For, in our opinion, the noncontributory system of insurance is economically unsound. When workers do not share the costs of a pension system, they are likely to make unreasonable demands for increases in benefits. Moreover, under a contributory pension and social insurance system, which reduces the cost to industry, pension and benefit payments can be more generous. And the worker has the added satisfaction of feeling that he has earned the right to such payments.

The President's fact-finding board has, to be sure, asserted that protection of the human machine against vicissitudes of old age and ill health should be regarded as one of the first charges against business. But the fact remains that it has not heretofore been so regarded. Nor is it possible to make adequate provision for the great majority of workers under private pension plans. Nor do we believe that the great majority of workers would agree with Mr. Murray that a company should not be in business if it is unable to finance the kind of pension system he is demanding for the steelworkers.

The presidential fact-finding board on which Mr. Murray relies for support of his thesis agreed that its recommendations on social insurance and pensions should not be applied automatically to individual companies. On the contrary, the board emphasized the necessity of individual bargaining between the union and the smaller companies to determine what deviations, if any, should be made from its general recommendations. To insist upon unconditional acceptance of a welfare system costing employers 10 cents per hour in disregard of the ability to pay of individual companies would mean that some steelworkers employed by financially weak companies would doubtless suffer the fate of the coal miners whose pension benefits had to be suspended because the fund was bankrupt.

Even if the steel companies were willing to abandon opposition to the noncontributory system of insurance, they must still consider the cost to themselves of a pension system. If they promise more than they can perform, the workers will in the long run be the losers. In short, the issue raised in the present dispute cannot be settled satisfactorily except by direct negotiations between the companies and the union. The immediate task confronting the Government's mediators is to persuade the principals to try again to find a solution by getting around the conference table instead of digging in for an all-out fight that would be nothing but an endurance contest.

Back To Normalcy

There is no better indication that life is again becoming humdrum, Russian bomb or no, than the reemergence of the faddism that marked the 20's and 30's. The distinctive profession of flagpole sitting, for example, recently has enjoyed quite a revival, to no more apparent purpose than before. The record for sustained airplane flights has just been set by two weary young men who remained aloft some six weeks or more over Yuma, Ariz. There are rumors that marathon dancing is on the way back. And although we have had no positive word of a revival of the unique pastime of swallowing goldfish, undoubtedly college pranksters who gave birth to the fad originally, can be counted on to come forth with something equally intriguing.

All of these feats pale, however, before the accomplishment, reported on the front pages, of a young sea lion from California, named Pierre Cilion, who has just swum the English Channel in five hours—his contribution to a radio stunt program. No one has ascertained what Pierre himself thought of his achievement in cutting in half the existing record. Even with the indignity of a corset, however, Pierre certainly fared better than the 20-odd correspondents who covered his excursion. Many of them made the trip sans culottes because they had to wade through the surf to the boats, and about half of them were seasick. The moral of all this seems to be that life is not humdrum for a reporter, or that Horatio Alger is becoming outmoded, and the sillier you are the more publicity you get.

China's Rulers

For a long time I have been impressed by the soundness and wisdom of your editorials on China. We could bleed ourselves white in the attempt to save that colossal, distant and different country from communism, and when we had enfeebled ourselves we would find it still dominated by dictator war lords, enriching themselves by exploiting the people. The only satisfaction we would get is that it would again be called a republic or a democracy.

Why not let the Russians do the self-bleeding? They can not make a formidable power out of the quagmire of 450 millions of starving peoples, whose poverty and multitudes have always defeated the invader. As the thousands of years of Chinese history show, China in the long run is unconquerable by any foreign foe, and the foremost problem of the Chinese is to get a good government of their own as only the Chinese can do. A nation with three times the population of the United States both could and would defend its own frontiers if it had a fairly honest and fairly efficient government.

The job we have undertaken, assisting the nations of Europe which have parliamentary governments in protecting themselves, is surely big enough. We cannot defend Asia as well. But, on the other hand, the Soviet Union has not the power and resources to dominate the thousand million people of that heterogeneous continent, which has never been united and made formidable. There are limits to our capacity to defend and democratize others, and it would be a mistake to let our hostility to the Kremlin lead us into helpless adventures.

"Petty Jealousy"

We desire to protest vigorously against your September 29 editorial, Petty Jealousy, specifically, that portion which states that the increase in salary voted by the House of Representatives (H.R. 4495) on September 27 for postal employes "may well be justified, although it comes on the heels of a pay boost granted the postal employes two years ago."

Justification for each and every request contained in H.R. 4495 was made by the representatives of the postal groups before both the Senate and House committees at the time public hearings were held. On two separate occasions, a majority of the members of the House signed a discharge petition to force H. R. 4495 out of committee; on Tuesday 333 (not 332 as you erroneously reported) members of the House voted to pass the bill. In view of this overwhelming favorable sentiment in the House, do you not think it is "petty" and "invidious" and "irrelevant" on the part of The Washington Post to guess that the increase in benefits contained in H. R. 4495 "may well be justified"?

Your editorial closes by stating: "A decent and equitable pay scale is now an absolute requisite to good Government." We agree with The Washington Post 100 percent; however, we contend that a "decent and equitable" pay scale is the right of the rank and file employe and top-level executives. Apparently The Washington Post believes it is the exclusive right of the brass in Government.

It might be well to state for the record that almost without exception the representatives of the various postal organizations testified favorably for the executive pay bills. On the other hand, these same executives almost fell over each other trying to convince the Congress that the employe pay bills would bankrupt the Federal Government if enacted.

Inadequate Retirement

I wish to correct a misquote of my letter published in your issue October 11.

You printed, "The Civil Service Retirement Report shows that in 1939 the average annuity paid to retired Federal Employes was $778. (It had a purchasing power of $978.)"

Industry Stockpiles

Your news item of October 5 on how the current strikes in the coal mining and steel industries are affecting the production of certain lines of merchandise, seems grossly incorrect.

It is the common practice of manufacturers to have on hand a stockpile of materials which are needed to produce their goods.

Many weeks, and in fact, many months ahead, plans are made in manufacturing establishments which control the production, distribution and sale of their products. And in order to carry out these plans, engineering and production departments prepare lists in minute detail of all materials and the purchasing departments secure these materials. Consequently manufacturers have on hand for immediate use all necessary materials which are required to produce their goods according to schedule.

It usually takes manufacturers many weeks or perhaps many months to complete the construction of goods ready for distribution to purchasers. Therefore, since the coal strike and the steel strike have only been in effect for a few days, it is not seen wherein the stock piles of these basic materials could have been depleted to such an extent as to affect the manufacture of goods at this time.

Why A Steel Strike?

"Why a steel strike?" asks the Nation's largest steel company in newspaper advertisements. Because I believe that its own answer is far from accurate or frank, may I suggest an answer?

The immediate issue is clear enough. The union requests company contributions equal to 10 cents per hour for the purpose of providing insurance and pension protection. The industry has agreed to do so. But, it adds, it will pay the 10 cents only if the employes agree to make some additional payments toward the purchase of insurance and pensions.

Just what does this dispute come down to? The union, in accordance with the fact-finders' panel, waived its demand for a specified amount of protection. It agreed to be satisfied with as much insurance and pensions which a total of 10 cents per hour could buy. The industry's position resolves itself into the simple proposition that the employes, in order to receive "10 cents worth" of benefits from the industry, must buy some additional protection for themselves. This is a new twist on tie-in sales!

Collective bargaining takes on a radically new complexion, when one party tells the other how it must spend its own money on itself. For the industry to insist that union members must, out of their own pockets, buy some additional insurance for themselves is not unlike the union members insisting that the company buy additional fire insurance, or that it fix up a more luxurious office for the president, or that dividend payments should be more liberal or more conservative.

The contributory system, as such, is not the issue. A wealth of data is available to show that there is nothing new about noncontributory plans—both in the steel industry and throughout American industry generally. As the panel pointed out, collective bargaining plans in the last few years have been almost all on the noncontributory basis. Union responsibility in the administering of funds bears no direct relation to the contributory nature of the plan. If, however, the industry was itself wedded to the contributory system as a matter of great principle, why did it not suggest a modest increase which would then be earmarked for insurance deductions? Such a formula could have been happy, and a costly strike could have been avoided.

I am amazed at the steel industry's failure to stick by its own economic argument in the course of this controversy. In the final analysis, it argued impressively before the panel, all the union demands must be thought of in terms of costs. What it agrees to pay out in holidays or vacations or pension costs, it could presumably have been persuaded to pay out in direct costs in the form of wages. Similarly, employes' contributions to pension funds come from the wages paid out by the company.

Because of this basic economic fact, the company, on the one hand, is justified in arguing that it pays for everything, and the workers, on the other hand, are justified in their contention that even in a noncontributory system, they are in effect, paying for everything themselves. What is more important than who gets credit, however, is that in the present steel situation both parties have agreed that the health of the industry permits and the situation requires the expenditure of 10 cents per hour for insurance and pensions. Why then a strike?

This observer cannot escape the conclusion that the industry's intransigeance flows simply from its refusal to abide by a recommendation of a Government panel, no matter how eminently fair and reasonable that recommendation might be. It is a tragic thing indeed that the industry places this "principle" above the economic needs of the Nation.

Facts For Admirals

IN THE current shocking outburst of the feud between the armed services, not the least shocking feature is the display of bland contempt for plain facts. For example, more than half of the naval aviators' angry testimony has been aimed to prove the worthlessness of strategic aviation by proving the worthlessness of the B-36. Yet this is obvious nonsense.

Moreover, the nonsense must be well understood by Admiral A. W. Radford, who has organized and is leading the naval aviators' attack on service unification. For Admiral Radford must at least be familiar with the outlines of our war plans. And if Admiral Radford has this much knowledge, he must also know that the B-36 groups are merely the most publicized element in the American strategic air arm.

In the originally projected 70-group Air Force, 20 groups were assigned to the strategic air arm, of which no more than 6 would have been B-36 groups. In the reduced Air Force resulting from President Truman's peculiar decision to halt the American defense build-up, 14 groups are assigned to the strategic air arm, of which only 4 are B-36 groups.

At present, the other groups composing the strategic air arm are equipped with modernized B-29s and B-50s. But as soon as the Boeing Co. can get the plane into full production, all the B-29s and B-50s will be replaced with B-47s. This new six-jet bomber has been specifically exempted by the naval aviators from the criticism of the B-36. And so it must be, for the B-47 will combine truly remarkable speed and altitude characteristics which are still classified, with range equivalent to the B-29 range.

THIS balance between longer and shorter range aircraft within the strategic air arm represents a reasoned decision by Gens. Hoyt Vandenberg, Joseph T. McNarney and the other Air Force leaders, which was in turn confirmed by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Under this decision, the bulk of the strategic air arm will be composed of shorter range planes that will operate from overseas bases, precisely because such planes can have better speed and altitude characteristics, but an intercontinental element is also necessary, in order to reduce the temptation to try to seize our overseas bases. This intercontinental element is provided by the B-36.

In short, the decision last winter to equip four groups with the B-36, was a calculated risk. And another decision was simultaneously taken, to press forward with production of the B-47 with all speed. If the admirals were logical, they ought to attack the whole decision, and not a part.

Unfortunately, logic has been less conspicuous in the recent testimony than courage and intensity of feeling. And this is perhaps the case because the whole trouble started with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's cancellation of the Navy's giant carrier.

IN BRIEF, the admirals have successively said that atomic bombs could not be delivered to strategic targets because the destruction of such targets would not be decisive and because the whole business was immoral and irreligious. Yet the giant carrier was intended to gain for the Navy a share of the Air Force's strategic air mission. And the carrier was therefore to do all the things the admirals have doubted or denounced.

The carrier could not be justified in any other way, and its role as a strategic air weapon was in fact admitted by its proponents to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Furthermore, there are unavoidable limitations on the performance of aircraft that must take off from and land on carriers, however gigantic. All the criticisms of strategic aviation by Captain Trapnell, Admiral Ofstie and their colleagues apply to the bombers that would have operated from the giant carrier. In almost every way, the performance of these bombers would have been inferior to the performance of the B-47.

What, then, is all the shouting about? The answer is simple. The shouting is about Secretary Johnson's attempt to confine the Navy to its primary mission of maintaining control of the seas, allotted to it by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

This does not mean that Secretary Johnson is beyond criticism. The plain truth is that the slowdown in our defense preparations, jointly enforced by President Truman and Secretary Johnson, has left us without enough defense to put in your boot. But the now-abandoned defense concept of General Eisenhower and the Joint Chiefs is based on the fact that the Soviet Union is a nonnaval power. It therefore calls for reductions in the Navy, combined with increases in the strength of ground force, Air Force and our overseas allies. Thus Secretary Johnson's shocking slowness to implement the positive side of our defense concept is extremely unlikely to irritate the admirals.

Nehru's Prospectus For India's Economy

By Thomas P. Krock
President, Thomas Krock Associates, International Public Relations Counselors

THE VISIT to the United States by Prime Minister Nehru of India is of the utmost importance in the realm of world political-economic affairs.

Nehru is coming here for high level policy talks that should lay the ground work for important economic developments in Asia which would go a long way towards strengthening democratic processes in this area of the world.

The American people should be vitally interested in the personality and background of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, born a Brahman aristocrat, but all his life a champion of the masses. He has served as a link between the Congress Party and the people of India. Other Indian leaders may be primarily political or mystical in their approach, Nehru is primarily economic in his thinking and approach to India's problems and place in the sisterhood of nations.

Originally, Nehru was a Socialist theorist; some considered him Marxist in his outlook. But today, although he may act politically, he may even talk upon occasion mystically, he thinks as an economist and has developed into one with an increasingly practical viewpoint.

TO UNDERSTAND Nehru's economic creed, particularly as it has changed, developed and matured, is to form an understanding of India which is slowly stepping forth as an economic giant as well as to grasp its production and investment potentialities.

Nehru is a hero to the Indian masses and they have an unshakable faith in him. There is no doubt that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru's economic philosophy will shape India's ways of work, even wealth, for many generations yet to come.

Nehru always looked upon Indian independence as much more than the release of political prisoners, or parliamentary rights. To him it meant freedom in terms of economic advancement for India. And he was the first to explain these facts to the people of India.

The meaning and word freedom as expounded by Nehru moved away from the transcendental to the tangible, while at the same time he laid the foundations for India's trade union movement and its peasants' organizations from the year 1919 down to the present time. In 1929, at Nehru's personal insistence, the Nationalist Congress stated its firm belief in economic democracy as being hand in glove with its political goal of Indian emancipation into a democratic self-governing nation.

IN THE United States, and in the world in general, the thing that is not sufficiently realized is that the main force behind Nehru's career has been, and still remains, the burning desire to improve India's standards of living, and to remove the pauperization which binds the millions of Indians.

For more than 20 years Nehru has been a firm believer in the fact that India must have rapid industrialization to relieve the pressure on the land and to combat poverty. He knew that no country could be politically or economically independent unless it was highly industrialized by means of modern technology. He was convinced also that as long as India was industrially backward she would upset the world equilibrium and even encourage aggressive tendencies among the more developed countries against India.

Although visualizing the India of the future with heavy industries and all the other benefits of a modern, up-to-date state, Nehru was also very much aware of the dangers of industrialization without coordination and control. The unequal distribution of wealth, the profits of the few at the expense of the many, persuaded him that an unregulated anarchic industrialization would not improve economic conditions in India.

Originally attracted to socialism and Marxism as the best means of solving the many and varied problems of India, Nehru eventually found these theories wanting in many important aspects with the consequence his thinking and ideas changed until his present frame of mind and outlook came into being.

IN 1938 Nehru prepared a comprehensive report on Indian economy, issued through the national planning committee of the Indian National Congress of which he was chairman. This committee was made up of businessmen, industrialists, labor leaders, agricultural experts who assessed the various contemplated projects in sincere, concrete, down-to-earth terms which impressed Nehru greatly and lastingly and which contributed greatly towards his present economic thinking. The recommendations of this committee were more reformist than socialist in their outlook and they did not recommend rigid control by the state over all industries, but rather that the state should regulate them. The role of private enterprise was restricted.

In the decade that has followed this report the destinies of the 350 millions of people of India have been, for the most part, guided by Nehru. No important plan was set into effect without his approval. In Nehru's capacity as Foreign Minister of India, he personnaly determined India's attitudes in international affairs, and in his present capacity as Prime Minister his views on economic affairs are firmly entrenched in the government's domestic policies.

India's hard-won freedom entailed great suffering and Prime Minister Nehru has faced, and still faces, complicated and trying issues. The division of the country into India and Pakistan had very adverse repercussions on the former's economic structure. The supply of raw materials was greatly reduced, transport dislocated, which in its turn reduced the production capacity of India. In turn inflation entered the picture and threatened to throw the nation's economy out of gear.

By 1947 the volume of industrial disputes reached their peak, resulting from the Dearness Allowance (a cost of living bonus). Communal riots brought about mass migration and nonproduction. Floods destroyed other crops and as a result famine became a serious threat. However, by the end of the year Nehru's efforts had met with definite success. He appealed for a nationwide effort to repair the economy and an all-out production drive to curb inflation which, in turn, would lower the cost of living and remove the primary source of labor disputes. Production showed an upward trend in all vital industries—jute, textiles, steel and sugar. Nehru declared all strikes to be an antisocial act; and as a result of his behest, together with the general economic improvement, the strike curve went down.

IN APRIL, 1948, India's economic position emerged as hopeful. Nehru announced his government's economic policy for the future. The government is to exercise monopoly control over coal, iron, steel, aircraft, and shipbuilding, in addition to the railroads and the munitions plants. Existing privately-owned enterprises in these fields will be allowed 10 years to develop after which period the question of their nationalization, with compensation, is to be reviewed. If they have made real contributions to national prosperity in a manner satisfactory to the government of India they may remain in private hands.

Certain basic industries, such as salt, automobiles, tractors, machine tools, industrial and hydro-electrical equipment, rubber, paper, drugs, chemicals, textiles and shipping are to be subject to varying degrees of government control and regulation. The government is to generate and distribute all electric light and power through its own public corporations similar to TVA. Cottage industries in weaving and manufacture are being encouraged. The rest of the industrial field is left open for private enterprise, but the state would also progressively participate and would not hesitate to intervene if private enterprise proved itself unsatisfactory.

In line with announced government policy, Prime Minister Nehru promptly went ahead with the planning and development of such projects as multi-purpose river dams, locomotive, aircraft, and fertilizer factories. Under his chairmanship and guidance a national planning committee was set up for the purpose of planning and developing dams for electric energy and irrigation, to reduce India's dependence on imports of food stuffs. Projects already under construction will irrigate over 27 million acres of uncultivated land and make India self-sufficient in food by 1951-1952.

NEHRU'S socialist reputation has caused caution on the part of foreign investors. Recently, Prime Minister Nehru stated that American investors would be compensated in dollars in the event of nationalization—which is a remote action—as long as the key industries are kept going and are employing many people. He said "We would rather use our resources for developing new projects and employing more people. If these industries are well managed privately, we see no need for nationalization at any time."

The Prime Minister also declared that he was anxious to build in India a middle class, like the American middle class, which would prove the strongest bulwark possible against communism.

These statements made by Nehru may or may not draw foreign investments into India, but they certainly pointedly present the great change in his thinking and economic views. They show the obvious trend away from nationalization, which is the first step toward a socialistic state. His willingness to abandon nationalization refutes his own belief of 20 years ago that the principles of socialism and Marxism could be easily transferred to India, and show his great ability to adapt his thinking to the realistic thinking necessary in the world of today.

Nehru's ideas of the mixed economy are born out of his humbleness and practical mind and reflects his attempt to find a common meeting ground between the conflicting economic doctrines. How far this will be successful in solving India's manifold problems in the economic field will be revealed by the future. But the sincerity of Nehru's economic goal is unquestionable.

During his visit in the United States, Prime Minister Nehru can learn much from our way of life and economic setup to assist him in guiding India through a most difficult period in that country's history. It is hoped that he will be given every opportunity to see and study at first hand the things that make this country great.

Congress Hears Nehru Warn Against Foreign Aggression

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Prime Minister Nehru assured applauding members of Congress yesterday India would not stay on the sidelines in the event of aggression anywhere.

"We are neither blind to reality nor do we propose to acquiesce in any challenge to man's freedom, from whatever quarter it may come," he declared.

"Where freedom is menaced, or justice threatened, or where aggression takes place, we cannot be and shall not be neutral."

The leader of India's 320 million people, speaking in a shy and subdued manner, read his speech to separate meetings of the House and Senate. He coupled his warning to aggressors with a thinly veiled plea to the United States to work for peace and reconciliation.

The greater a nation is, he said, "the greater is its responsibility" to find a way of dispelling the danger of war and the fear of war. He said he did not know how far Gandhi's nonviolent technique in India could be applied "in wider fields of action."

"Yet I have no doubt," he declared, "that the basic approach which lay behind that technique of action was the right approach in human affairs and the only approach that ultimately solves a problem satisfactorily.

"We have to achieve freedom and defend it. We have to meet aggression and to resist it, and the force employed must be adequate to the purpose.

"But even when preparing to resist aggression, the ultimate objective, the objective of peace and reconciliation, must never be lost sight of, and heart and mind must be attuned to this supreme aim, and not swayed or clouded by hatred or fear."

The immediate task of his government, he said, was to raise the low standard of living of the masses of India through "greater production, more equitable distribution, better education and better health."

"We realize," he said, "that self-help is the first condition of success for a nation no less than for an individual . . . But though our economic potential is great, its conversion into finished wealth will need much mechanical and technological aid.

"We shall therefore gladly welcome such aid and cooperation on terms which are of mutual benefit. We believe that this may well help in the larger solution of the problems that confront the world. But we do not seek any material advantage in exchange for any part of our hard-won freedom."

This was the nearest he came to mentioning India's need of World Bank loans and technical assistance under the so-called Point Four program.

Before leaving New Delhi he said he did not intend to ask the United States for economic or other help during this visit.

Later in the day he had his first general discussion of economic and political subjects with American officials at an hour's meeting in Secretary of State Acheson's office.

Those at the meeting included Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, who has been piloting the Point Four program; Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, who may go to China soon on a survey mission; Counsellor George Kennan, the department's chief policy planner, and officials in charge of Middle East and Indian affairs.

Nehru began a crowded day at 7 yesterday morning playing in the Indian Embassy garden with children of embassy officials. This was his own idea, a surprise to members of the embassy staff, who received word at short notice the Prime Minister would enjoy meeting their children.

After breakfast he spent an hour and a half at the National Gallery of Art. He showed particular interest in Italian old masters, notably the Bellini-Titian "Feast of the Gods," and in the Stuart and Copley portraits of Washington.

He lunched at the Capitol with Vice President Barkley and members of the Foreign Policy Committees of the House and Senate. This was his first opportunity to get acquainted with legislative leaders.

His afternoon ended with a courtesy call on President Truman at the White House, a tea at the home of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, and a visit to the Library of Congress, at his own wish, to see some of the Indian books and manuscripts there.

President Truman told his news conference yesterday that Nehru had made a profound impression on him. He said he found the Prime Minister a fine gentleman and a great public servant who was trying to do his best for his country and people.

Our Political Economy

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

Too Much, Too Soon

THE BRITISH crisis has become as familar to us as an old toothache—familar, yet strange, too. For most of us have no real idea what makes it hurt so.

Last month's devaluation only added to the difficulties of understanding. When economic crisis is acted out in terms of foreign exchange, the layman quickly loses himself in a maze of technicalities. We read of dwindling reserves, "dollar gaps" and devaluation, and the words have a cold, unreal sound.

Let us get at the problem by another door. Leaving aside, for the moment, all questions of international exchange, which are for experts only, let us go to the heart of Europe's economic difficulties.

The staggering economic fact in the world today is American productivity. Our output per man hour is not only far beyond that of Europe, it has been increasing at the rate of 2½ percent a year. Europe, already lagging before the war, and hard hit by war itself, has only recently begun to catch up to prewar pace.

Translated into human terms, this means that the American standard of living is not only the envy of workers everywhere, it is the root of labor unrest. Not only are we rich in the midst of universal poverty, we are growing richer at a rate no nation can match.

YOU MAY ask whether this really matters. There are, we know, many men in public life who think that because capitalism has thus outproduced everyone, we shall be strengthened in our ideological war with communism.

This is shallow thinking. It is like saying to a man ground down with the burden of hopeless poverty that he, too, can be like John D. Rockefeller if he only works harder. Wealth becomes, not a source of universal admiration, but a source of hatred.

The far-sighted men in the executive branch and in Congress who fashioned Marshall Plan aid for Europe understood this. A world in want is far likelier to be attracted to communism's doctrine of share-the-poverty than to one of admire-our-riches.

ERP is meaningless, therefore, unless it can help the world to help itself. We can measure its success by one criterion above all: How quickly will it raise European productivity to enable our neighbors to come closer to our rate of output? Only if the workers in France, Britain, Belgium and Italy really believe that they, too, have a chance for the abundant life can we hope to make freedom attractive to them.

NOW WHAT, you may ask, does this have to do with exchange rates? Let us begin by supposing there were no such thing as separate currencies. Imagine, for a moment, that everyone used the dollar for business transactions.

We should then quickly see the crisis in its real terms. Because British productivity is low, British workers would have to work longer and harder for less pay. Either the cost of a British car would reflect obsolete production methods in high prices, or the price would be forced down by cutting labor's paycheck. If British manufacturers were to stay in business at all, prices would have to go down to world levels.

Now let us see how things really work out. As it happens, there is a confusion of world currencies, each controlled by its own government. Each nation can, by setting a high or low price on its own money, raise and lower the world price of its exports. When the pound is high, a British car costs too much on the world market. Britain cuts the pound, and suddenly the car appears to cost much less.

Dr. Rennie is assistant professor of economics at Johns Hopkins University and formerly was international fiscal analyst for the Federal Reserve Board. Mrs. Rennie, a former State Department official, is author of a history of Argentina and has written articles for Harper's, Foreign Affairs and the Foreign Policy Association.

ALL THIS is money magic, but as Sir Stafford Cripps well knows, it does not get at the heart of the problem, which is Britain's low output per man-hour of labor. There is no real way for a country to have a high living standard without high productivity.

It is no wonder that devaluation was accompanied by signs of labor unrest. Unions are economically sophisticated, and they know that the cost of cutting the pound will come from the pockets of the British workers. Inflation is now generally anticipated. This is one way to cut the standard of living. Prices rise, consumption falls.

But unions are not quite sophisticated enough, for both in England and France they seem to believe that wage rises are the answer to their problem. If we are going to have inflation as a result of currency devaluation, they say in effect, then we want higher wages.

ONE WOULD think, by now, that the wage-price spiral would be an old and wearisome story. Yet nobody ever seems to learn the lesson. To raise wages without raising productivity is to get on the familiar treadmill; wages and prices chase each other, while nations are torn by labor strife and output suffers.

When the cut in the British pound set off a chain reaction of currency devaluations, the world entered a very serious phase in its economic recovery. Just how serious we have not even begun to realize.

It is certainly no secret, or at least it is a singularly ill-kept one, that Washington was initially responsible for the fall of the pound. The dollar was low in relation to demand for it, and the pound was high. This caused a continuous shortage of dollars and a glut of pounds. Every year, when a dollar deficit showed up on the books, Britain asked us to close the gap with gifts and loans.

Doubtless Secretary Snyder was weary of this drain on the Treasury. He reasoned that if the pound came into line with realities, the artificial dollar scarcity would largely disappear.

This is true, of course, but it represents a superficial approach to the problem. Our gifts and loans have been the key to Europe's increasing postwar productivity. They have made possible a great rise in capital investment, in productivity and in world trade.

THERE is great danger that with the disappearance of these dramatic "dollar gaps" we shall lose sight of the continuing need for investment abroad. Not only may devaluation hide from our Congress the world-wide need for dollars, it may hide from British manufacturers the fact of their low productivity. Since British goods have become cheaper in American dollars, British industry will not be under the same shotgun compulsion to streamline its production methods.

And then, of course, there is the political issue of labor unrest. French workers, close to bare subsistence levels, are understandably frightened at the prospect of lower living standards. British workers fear they may lose much of what they have gained.

Faced by revolt in the ranks, the Labor Party may be forced to maintain present standards of living by cutting down on capital investment. For the eventual goal of higher output, this course would be calamitous.

We wonder whether American officials who pressed for devaluation really thought the problem through. They were right in thinking that Europe must some day trim its economic budget to fit its income. But is today the time for it?

Europe is like a woman who has undergone a major operation and has begun her hospital convalescence. Her husband may get tired of hospital bills and order her home. But if he does, he runs the risk of far greater outlay in the end. She may have a relapse and she may die, leaving him not only with added doctor bills, but with an expensive funeral as well.

In short, Snyder's well-meant effort to close the dollar gap may well prove to have been a case of too much, much too soon.

Rumors of Shortages Spread By Reds Provoke India Riots

Bombay, India, Oct. 13 (AP).—Rumor of shortages in salt, sugar and matches touched off a wave of shop looting in north Bombay today. Two persons were slain and five others were injured by police fire.

Tension throughout Bombay was high as shops began closing their doors in some thickly populated areas. Rifle-bearing police in large numbers were moved to important street crossings.

Thousands lined up for the reportedly scarce commodities.

The government denied there was a scarcity of salt, but the denial apparently had little effect. Some observers expressed the belief the rumors were started by Communists to create incidents while Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru is visiting the United States.

Police stations throughout the city were strengthened. Police arrested 17 persons for looting and threatened to prosecute anyone spreading rumors of shortages.

CCC Scheduled to Add About 900 Employes If Funds Measure Passes

About 900 new employes will be hired by Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation if Congress approves the $3,450,000 deficiency appropriation recommended for it by the President.

CCC is now limited to 12 million dollars for administrative expenses. The President has asked that it be raised to $15,340,000. He told Congress the additional funds are needed to administer the expanded price support and storage facilities programs and to export wheat under the new International Wheat Agreement.

STORY: Frank Wilson, Census' information chief, was having lunch the other day with Stanley Cohen of Advertising Age. During the course of their conversation, he said: "Any time now a child will be born and he'll be the 150th million person in the country."

"Why, I'll speak to my wife about that," Cohen commented in his cooperative manner . . . "I'm afraid you can't make the deadline," Wilson confided, "because we're just on the verge of reaching the 150-million figure."

The next morning Cohen called Wilson to announce: "Number 150 million is here. It's a boy."

TODAY—MAYBE: The Senate-House conferees on the classified and postal pay-reclassification bills have scheduled another meeting for 9 a. m. today. A quorum couldn't be rounded up yesterday and the 3 p. m. meeting was canceled. Several conferees have engagements for today and it may be difficult to keep a quorum in conference until an agreement is reached.

GAO: Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren has set up a new unit in his General Accounting Office to make comprehensive field audits of Federal agencies. He named William A. Newman, jr., an assistant director of the Corporation Audit Division, to head it up.

JOB FIGHT: The battle over the 5500 temporary clerical jobs in the Census Bureau continued yesterday without a decision.

The Senate Appropriations Committee took an unusual step and had a hearing on the President's request for $870,000 to set up the jobs in Philadelphia. As reported here yesterday, a subcommittee of the House committee voted to reject the President's request. Instead, it tentatively approved $3,800,000 for the construction of a new building at nearby Suitland, Md., to house the workers.

The Senate is on record as opposed to the new building. A fight is due to be made there to carry out the President's plan for the Philadelphia job shift.

Indicted Man Wins His Fight To Keep Phone

Court Rules C&P Acted Hastily on Fay's Letter After Gambling Arrests

Murray H. Olf, operator of the State Wide Sports News Distributors, Colmar Manor, Md., yesterday won his court battle to prevent removal of his telephones.

In a 13-page opinion, which will be followed in several days by a permanent injunction, Prince Georges County Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury ruled the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore City had insufficient grounds for discontinuing Olf's telephone service.

One of 34 Indicted

Olf was among 34 men indicted on gambling charges following several raids by special agents of United States Attorney George Morris Fay last March. After the raids Fay sought removal of some 324 telephones, including Olf's, to break up what he called a multi-million-dollar gambling business here.

Olf was among those persons who went to court to prevent removal of his phones. He was granted a temporary injunction last April pending a hearing on a permanent injunction, which was held September 7.

At the hearing, the telephone company contended that it had acted properly in discontinuing Olf's service entirely on the basis of a letter from Fay that he had "competent evidence" the phones were being used for illegal purposes.

Judge Marbury found, however, that "the company cannot rely solely upon the 'color' of such information without first having tested the accuracy of it to determine whether there was valid basis in the law upon which to cancel its contract."

No Tie to Telephone

Judge Marbury said the testimony of representatives of the telephone company and Western Union about telephones and tickers in Olf's place "completely failed to connect the plaintiff with any transaction within the District of Columbia involving the use of his telephone or otherwise."

"The evidence at the September hearing was nothing more than to show the plaintiff was engaged in dissemination of information concerning sports events by means of telegraphic equipment in his place of business connected with various clients or subscribers who might use it in the furtherance of gambling enterprises," Judge Marbury added.

Last week, District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm ruled that evidence, secured by Fay's agents during the raid on Olf's place, will be admissible in the Government's case against Olf. The search warrant used by the agents and based on affidavits by an undercover agent and a telephone company employe was valid, Judge Tamm found.

Crime Probe Head Asks For $10,000

A request for $10,000 to investigate Washington crime and law enforcement was filed in the House yesterday.

The resolution was presented to the House by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) after he had been appointed to head a special five-member House District subcommittee to conduct the crime probe.

Serving with Davis will be Representatives Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.), George J. Bates (R., Mass.) and Sid Simpson (R., Ill.).

Announced by McMillan

Their appointments were announced by District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) after an executive session of the District Committee.

Davis said that he plans to call the special committee together for a meeting as soon as possible, perhaps today.

A first move is slated to be the selection of a staff for the crime investigation. McMillan said the full commission had authorized appointment of not more than two persons.

Believes $10,000 Enough

Davis said that he believed the $10,000 fund would be sufficient for the purposes of the investigation as he now foresees the job.

The resolution for the special fund was referred to the House Administration Committee.

Bates, who is ranking minority member of the District Committee, told reporters he hopes the crime probe will not develop any tinge of sensationalism. He said the probe should point up any shortcomings in the administration of law enforcement here, and develop means to correct any weaknesses.

House Votes Bill to Increase Municipal Court Judges

A three-judge increase for Municipal Court here was voted by the House yesterday.

A voice vote sent to the Senate a bill for the three judges with language identical to that approved by the Senate District Committee. The court now has 10 judges.

Passage of the bill came after a 286-to-30 rollcall vote beat down the motion of Representative Gross (R., Iowa) to send the measure back to the House District Committee for further study.

Gross forced the rollcall after a preliminary standing vote against his motion, 7 to 49, failed to show there was not a quorum present.

Exception Rejected

The move to send the measure back to committee grew out of a sharp dispute over proposed residence qualifications for the Municipal Court judges.

Under existing law, appointees to Municipal Court must either be judges in District courts or persons who have been bona fide residents of the District and practicing law here for the five years immediately before their appointment. Two of the possible 10 appointments, however, can be of persons outside the District.

Representative Harris (D., Ark.), in charge of the bill, presented a revision, backed by the Justice Department and by the Senate District Committee, to broaden the residence requirement to take in the District, plus Alexandria, and the four counties in the Washington metropolitan area. Representative Young (D., Iowa), moved to write in an exception to allow four of the judges to be appointed from outside the District. His proposal was beaten by a standing vote, 27 to 8.

As finally cleared, with the Harris amendment, the measure calls for five years law practice in the District before appointment to Municipal Court. But it makes clear that this experience qualification can be met either by private practice or by work as an attorney for the District or Federal Government.

Other Bills Approved

Harris explained that the change in the House bill to make it conform with that awaiting Senate action was to insure final approval at this session.

The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill sponsored by Representative Beall (R., Md.) to let Washington restaurants and hotels serve liquor on credit, under a special licenses costing $250, for a full year.

Also approved was a bill presented by Representative Kennedy (D., Mass.) to permit setting up common trust funds for improved investment in the District.

Typewriter Theft Suspect Is Held In $2000 Bond

Clyde Shropshire, jr., 33, 617 8th st. ne., was held for the grand jury under $2000 bond yesterday on a charge of theft of a typewriter from The Washington Post.

Police offered testimony at a hearing before United tates Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence that Shropshire was implicated in theft of 10 other typewriters, including one from the Navy Department.

He was arrested Wednesday, police said, when he attempted to pawn one of the stolen machines.

Kennedy Files Petitions to Get Vote on Rule

Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.) yesterday filed a petition to present the Senate-approved Washington home rule bill to the House for a vote in this Congress.

Signatures of 218 members, a majority of the House, on the petition would boost the bill past a House District Committee blockade set up when that group voted in August to table the measure.

Kennedy's petition is a discharge petition—it would discharge the District Committee from further consideration of the home rule bill, and bring the bill directly to a House vote.

Joining Kennedy in the discharge maneuver was Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), who spearheaded the drive in the last Congress that won District Committee approval of a similar home-rule measure. It was set aside by the House then as unfinished business, although preliminary test votes showed majority support for the plan. Similar majority support has been indicated for the home-rule idea in a survey by The Washington Post.

But even supporters of home rule were doubtful whether the discharge maneuver would succeed. Veteran House members said the discharge technique meets considerable resistance in the House because of circumventing the cherished committee system. One member—who was among the most active supporters of home rule last year and still favors it—said privately he would not sign the petition because he thinks the measure should go through regular committee channels.

House Majority Whip Percy Priest (D., Tenn.) said he did not think the discharge petition would accomplish very much. He said it would have "tough sledding—very little legislation is ever accomplished by the discharge method."

In filing his petition, Kennedy declared "I feel that the membership of the House should have the opportunity, long overdue, to express itself on the vital home rule legislation—especially in view of the overwhelming support it has received in the Senate."

He cited the survey by The Washington Post showing majority House sentiment in favor of home rule, and voiced confidence that the House would approve home rule if the measure reached a vote.

Kennedy's move had been under consideration for some time, and Washington pro-home-rule groups were prepared to start to work in its support. A special six-member committee of the District Democratic Central Committee has been set up to enlist House backing for the petition. A representative of the Washington committee of Americans for Democratic Action set to work buttonholing members for their signatures shortly after the petition was filed.

Treating Sleuth For Feigned Ills Costs Man, 82, $50

Frank Hayes, 82, of 927 15th st. nw., was fined $50 yesterday for treating the feigned backache of a police undercover man.

Detective Joseph A. Gabrys in Municipal Court, testified Hayes gave him three types of massage and vibration treatments for the back condition. In addition, Gabrys said, Hayes twisted his toes and told the detective he had an eye and sinus condition also.

Hayes denied violating the healing arts practice act. He said his treatment had nothing to do with drugs but was based on use of natural raw foods containing "atomic energy."

Decision Awaited

D. C. Likely To Lose Cash In VD Drive

The District may lose as much as $126,000 in United States Public Health Service grants for combating venereal disease.

This was disclosed yesterday by Dr. S. Ross Taggart, chief of the District Bureau of Venereal Disease. Final decision on the cuts, to become effective next June, will be made after Congress passes PHS appropriations, Dr. Taggart said.

If the cuts come, they probably will mean loss of the $110,000 annual grant for operation of the rapid treatment center at Gallinger Hospital, and $16,000 out of a general VD annual grant to the District of $83,000 for projects here. The $16,000 cut would curtail service in treatment, case-finding, and information programs, Dr. Taggart said.

As an alternative, Health Department officials have asked the Commissioners to create a supplemental budget item of $16,498 to offset the latter cut. And Dr. Taggart is prepared, if the slash in funds for the rapid treatment center materializes, to ask money from PHS to continue it on a reduced basis.

At the same time, the District of Columbia Social Hygiene Society asked Senator Neeley (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, for laws here requiring premarital and prenatal syphilis tests. The group called Washington a "picnic ground" for the syphilis spirochete.

"About 40 States, including West Virginia," the society said, "now have legislation to provide for premarital and prenatal tests for syphilis."

Dr. Taggart said that the District spends about $500,000 a year on St. Elizabeths Hospital patients whose ailments were brought on by venereal disease.

New Library Hours Set

The Falls Church library, at 151 E. Broad st., will be open mornings for the first time, starting Monday, according to Mrs. Carroll Shreve, chairman of the library board. New hours will be 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, and 7 to 9 p. m. evenings, except Saturdays. At the same time, appointment of Miss Jewel Drickamer, former Cleveland (Ohio) librarian, as Falls Church librarian was announced.

Doctor 'Guilty' In Grease Gun Assault Case

Dr. Isabelo R. Villaroman, 40, was convicted by a District Court jury yesterday of assaulting a 22-year-old man with a grease gun.

Sentencing of the crippled Filipino physician and cancer researcher was deferred by Judge Edward A. Tamm pending a report of the probation office.

Dr. Villaroman, who was physician to the late Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, was arrested after Connie Cox, 22, was struck in a filling station here. Cox suffered a fractured cheek bone in what was described as the aftermath of a traffic argument.

The defendant, who pleaded self-defense, testified that Cox called him a "Jap" and then put him in fear of his life by approaching in a menacing manner.

Cox denied this, and in turn said that he was called an obscene name by Dr. Villaroman, who then initiated the assault.

Assistant United States Attorney John C. Conliff, jr., acknowledged that Dr. Villaroman might have been a war hero, but added, "This does not give him the right to be a heel now."

Dr. Villaroman appeared during the trial in a body cast from the result of wounds suffered in a ship explosion during the war.

Municipal Court Formally Backs Old Fay Practice

Attorney George Morris Fay yesterday got official approval from the Municipal Court judges for a 50-year-old practice of his office.

The judges met and gave their assent to continuance of the procedure of the Federal prosecutors in issuing summonses to defendant and others in preliminary hearings before court action is taken in many cases.

Acting Chief Judge Arnold W. Scott said the meeting was requested by Fay who said legality of the summonsing and hearing practice had been questioned by certain members of his staff. Fay felt approval was needed to continue the system, according to Judge Scott.

Fire Rehearsal Set

2 Pickpocket Suspects Seized After Tussle, Chase, Tackle

A comedy kaleidoscope of a tussle on a streetcar, a bump by a taxicab, a police chase, and a flying tackle by two Marine officers mixed up yesterday to bring about arrest of two pickpocket suspects.

As result, police held the two men in cells last night for a special line-up today to be viewed by six women who recently have had their wallets "lifted" from their pocketbooks in streetcars.

Carl E. Neuman, 50, a Washington Terminal policeman, who was off duty, unarmed, and in plain clothes, started the tumult. He was aboard a streetcar on F st. nw., approaching 11th st.

Neuman said he saw two men jostle Mrs. Patricia D. Kemp, 4322 N. Fairfax dr., Fairfax, Va., and lift her wallet. He shouted and seized Suspect No. 1, who was nearest to him. The two tussled, fell to the floor, and rolled down the streetcar steps as a startled operator stopped the car and flipped the door-opening switch.

As Neuman and Suspect No. 1 rolled across the loading platform, Suspect No. 2 slipped off the trolley and vanished—for a time.

Neuman and No. 1 rolled from the platform to the pavement and were promptly nudged by a cab driven, police said, by Graciano Ancheta, 44, of 6202 Hillcrest pl., Chevy Chase, Md.

The nudge loosened Neuman's grasp, and Suspect No. 1 jumped up and fled southward on 11th st. Police Pvt. P. J. Mangum took up the chase, to E st., and toward 10th st. He couldn't fire for fear of injuring pedestrians. At 10th st. his shouts brought the Marine officers into action. They tackled No. 1 and brought him down.

In a taxicab on the way to police headquarters, No. 1 exclaimed to Mangum, "There's my pal." Mangum stopped the cab, collared No. 2, and loaded him in. He denied ever seeing No. 1.

But at headquarters, Neuman, already arrived, identified both men. They were locked up for the lineup. Neuman, who lives at 4909 Kansas ave. nw., suffered a skinned knee. Suspect No. 1 had a bruised hip. And Suspect No. 2 had indignant denials that he knew anything about the affair.

Congress Asked To Help Nearby Virginia Schools

Crowding Blamed Before House Unit On Loss of Taxes From U. S. Lands

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Because Arlington County is "the bedroom and office of Washington," it lacks taxable industries sufficient to support its schools, a House Labor and Education subcommittee was told yesterday.

The speaker, W. A. Early, Arlington's new school superintendent, was one of five Virginia educators who appeared before the committee to testify that communities whose school facilities have been overburdened because of Federal activities should receive Federal aid.

Early said that if Arlington is to keep pace with its expanding school population during the next seven years, it will have to construct classrooms at the rate of one a week. At present Arlington's 500 teachers are instructing 15,000 children in 338 regular classrooms. Seventy-seven classrooms have been converted from basements and other available space.

Enrollment Jumps

In nine years, he said, Arlington County has grown in population from 57,000 to 130,000 and the school enrollment from 7800 to 15,000.

"This growth is almost entirely due to expanded Government activities in Arlington, including the Pentagon and the Navy Annex," he said.

Early told the committee that more than 6000, or 40 percent, of the enrollment is composed of children whose parents work for the Government. While attracting thousands of new residents to Arlington, the Government has swallowed up much of the taxable land, he said.

He said that a seventh of Arlington's 24 square miles is federally-owned and removed from the tax rolls. Purchase of the Nevius tract for a veterans hospital removed 25 acres from tax lists. A similar plot of adjoining land will bring in $275,000 a year in taxes when construction is completed on a resident hotel, Early said.

$4,175,000 Lost in Taxes

Federal land estimated at $302,504,240 in Arlington would bring in a revenue of $4,175,000 annually if privately owned, Early said.

Federal low-cost housing projects have added other burdens to Arlington's already overcrowded schools, he said. Eight hundred children are attending Arlington schools from the Shirley, Pickett, Jeb Stuart and Jubal Early housing developments. State and Federal subsidies pay only $54,800 of the total cost of $136,000 a year to keep the children in school.

He argued that just as the Federal Government has assumed financial responsibility for educating children in areas such as Oak Ridge, Tenn., where it has taken over all land, it should assume a share of the cost of educating children in areas where it has title to a large portion of land, significantly reducing the tax base.

R. C. Haydon, assistant superintendent of public instruction for Virginia, testified Virginia schools will remain "inadequate" for 10 years unless the Federal Government comes to their aid. He said the Federal Government has a "responsibility" to take care of the situation it creates."

Wants U. S. to Pay 75%

W. T. Woodson, Fairfax County superintendent, told the committee the Federal Government should pay 75 percent of the cost of new school buildings in the county, when population has more than trebled in nine years. School enrollment this year alone has increased by 1708 students, he said.

"Rapid increase in population and overburdening of schools can be attributed only to activities of the Federal Government," Woodson said. "The impact of this rapid population increase cannot be absorbed and needed school facilities provided in the near future without outside financial assistance. The children are here now and cannot wait for facilities to be provided."

Woodson said the United States owns 12,500 acres of land in Fairfax valued at more than 98 million dollars. Taxed at a third of valuation it would yield more than $865,000 yearly, he said.

Woodson was questioned closely on the Fairfax tax rate by Representative Thomas H. Werdel (R., Calif.). California communities faced with problems similar to those of Fairfax have increased assessments until they are double those of Fairfax Werdel said.

When Woodson said he seriously doubted if Fairfax would vote for a school bond issue, Werdel said, "Our people willingly have floated bond issues."

T. C. Williams, Alexandria superintendent, said he supported the principle that communities should finance their own schools but suggested that the Federal Government pay sums equal to the amount that would be paid in taxes were the lands privately owned.

P-TA Aroused

Bus Opposed As Answer to School Jam

Parent opposition developed yesterday to a proposal to end part-time instruction for District school children by transporting them by bus from overcrowded to half-empty schools.

Mrs. Agnes Driggers, president of the Kenilworth School Parent-Teacher Association, sent a letter to School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning urging that "a more practical solution be found." The letter was approved by the executive board of the P-TA.

The letter said that bus transportation should be "only a last resort" and recommended that available funds be used instead to supply portable school buildings.

Proposed by Lee

Bus transportation was proposed by Board of Education member Adelbert W. Lee to end part-time instruction for 4000 city school children.

Mrs. Driggers said bus transportation would place an extra burden on the parent, the child and the school system.

Thirty-eight students now are attending the Kenilworth School part-time.

The full parent-teacher association will vote on the proposal at its meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the school, she said.

To Vote Monday Night

Parents of children attending the Stanton Elementary School which has eight part-time classes affecting 267 children, will vote on the proposal when they meet Monday at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Glenn H. Craig, president of the Stanton P-TA, said she will recommend that the parents vote against the plan.

"It is too pat a solution to the problem," she said.

She said children would be forced to ride three quarters of an hour through heavy traffic. Sixty children packed into a bus would be "unhealthy" particularly in winter, she said.

The children removed from their own Southeast community would be ostracized by other children in the Northwest section where they would be attending classes.

To Consider Plan Today

Mrs. Mary Thomas, acting president of the Patterson Elementary School P-TA, said her association has taken no official stand on the proposal. The executive committee will consider it at a meeting at 1:30 p. m. today.

Parents of Congress Heights Elementary School children who last week submitted a petition signed by 159 parents urging the Board of Education to consider bus transportation as a means of ending part-time instruction for 626 children at the school will conduct a poll the first of the week for the views of all parents.

Pre-School Child Survey Voted by Citizen Unit

A survey of preschool children resident in the Congress Heights area was voted last night by the Congress Heights Citizens Association, meeting at the Congress Heights School, 5th st. and Nichols ave. se.

The survey was voted to reinforce the association's request for at least one and preferably two more schools in the area in addition to one now being built.

The group voted to ask authorities to clear brush and rubbish from a Federal park area bounded by Raleigh and Trenton sts. and Waclark pl., so it may be used as a playground. Plans also were formulated for a Halloween party for children at the Congress Heights Playground.

Teacher Sick Leave Is Signed Into Law

President Truman yesterday signed the bill to give Washington public school teachers their first system of paid sick leave.

The law takes effect as of July 1, 1949. It provides for a 60-day accumulation of sick leave, to be collected at the rate of a day per school month, 10 days a year.

The 60-day allowance is for probationary and permanent teachers and attendance officers. Temporary teachers and attendance officers could accumulate a 10-day allowance.

Probationary and permanent teachers now in service are given immediate credit a the rate of a day's sick leave for each year of service up to 20.

The new law ends the practice of making District teachers, absent because of illness, pay substitutes.

Under the new law, sick leave can be taken not only for illness, but for the presence of contagious disease or death in the home, or for other pressing emergencies.

Teachers taking maternity leave could use all the sick leave to their credit.

The bill authorizes the School Board to make rules so the superintendent could advance up to 20 days sick leave, but if a teacher who gets such an advance gives up her job, she would have to refund pay for the period.

Germani's Recital of High Interest

By Paul Hume

Fernando Germani, titular organist of St. Peter's in the Vatican, played an organ recital last night in the First Congregational Church.

The famous musician, for several seasons organist of the Philadelphia Orchestra, confined his program to five works, each of high interest. Bach's C Minor Passacaglia and Fugue gave way to one of the charming Noels of Claude D'Aquin. These were followed by Mozart's F Minor Fantasy, the Pastorale of Roger-Ducasse, and Variations on an Original Theme by Max Reger.

Germani plays with much the same style as certain other European organists heard here in recent seasons. Marcel Dupre and Andre Marchal come to mind as illustrations of this rather academic, sometimes pedantic school of interpretation.

The Bach and Mozart moved at good pace, and with reasonable clarity, though a more detached touch would have helped each work in the more sonorous moments.

One must excuse organists for failing to enliven their recitals when playing in the particular building used last night. The instrument there lacks almost all sensuous appeal and any iota of splendor of tone in large passages. Germani attempted touching combinations in D'Aquin's Noel and the final pages of the Pastorale, but acoustics will block even the best intentions.

Tempos were slow and choppy in the Noel, and far too deliberate in the Pastorale to allow either piece to flow in the intended spirit. Organ recitals are often disappointing affairs to both lay public and organists alike.

It is a pity that the world's leading artists are so often handicapped by inadequate instruments. No pianist, violinist, or tympanist would so limit himself, but what can be done except to awaken church authorities and organ builders to a bad state of affairs?

2000 Hear Robeson Sing; No Trouble

Singer Paul Robeson, leftist concert artist, proclaimed his love for the "America of democracy" last night before a mixed audience of 2000 persons at Turner's Arena.

The local appearance of the baritone-political firebrand was without a single incident, according to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police.

Mindful of the riots when Robeson appeared at Peekskill, N. Y., police were prepared for any emergency.

For about two hours, Robeson sang and talked on the stage. He lashed out at what he termed "fascist hysteria" in America today.

"There is no question about my loyalty to America," he declared, "the America of democracy that I love to the depth of my feeling, but I will have nothing to do with the Dulles' fascists, the Rankins of Mississippi, and the Coxes of Georgia."

The singer said there are "many ways to freedom and many peoples who chose another way." He demanded complete and full freedom for the 15 million Negroes in America "upon whose backs was built the pioneer wealth of this Nation."

Negroes, he stated, have found a new friend in Communist China, in the Soviet Union and in Czechoslovakia and may soon, too, find a friend in Japan.

"I want to thank the police of this city," said Robeson, "and especially the Negro escort I had. They were very kind. I hope they will give the same protection to every Negro girl and boy and to every white girl and boy. This is the America that I love and that I shall gladly serve."

Better Tests Of Children's Sight Urged

Better vision through better testing is the aim of school and health authorities to who met yesterday with P-TA members at the District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

The nurses and members of the society, at 839 17th st. nw., offered to give instruction to anyone, upon request, in vision testing. They hope it will increase enrollment in sight conservation classes in District schools, while reducing the prevalence of sight deficiency.

Miss Helen Demary, director of the society, said experience has shown that one among 500 school children need the instruction. In District elementary schools, for example, there are now only 27 children enrolled in sight conservation classes, when best estimates show there should be nearer 100.

Smog at Donora Hit 6000, Ewing Says

By The Associated Press

The five-day smog which sickened almost 6000 persons at Donora, Pa., a year ago was the result of an unusual combination of warm, stagnant air and heavily smoke-polluted fog, the Public Health Service said yesterday.

The service's report was the first disclosure the effect of the poisoned air had been so widely felt. Accounts at the time told of 20 deaths and said several hundred were made ill.

The 200-page report was released by Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele.

He said Donora probably had another serious smog period in April 1945—"the vital statistics show there were almost twice as many deaths in the town as in an ordinary April or any ordinary month."

And he warned the circumstances could occur again there or in other highly industralized areas.

To prevent such a recurrence, Scheele recommended that:

1. Fog-afflicted industrial centers keep a close watch on weather conditions.

2. Industrial plants be curtailed or closed when smog condtions appear to be developing, to reduce contamination of air.

Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing called for immediate attention to the long-range national problem of air pollution.

"We can now say positively what couldn't be said with scientific proof—that contamination of air in industrial areas can cause serious acute disabling diseases," Ewing said.

"We must now determine the extent to which the health of people living in these communities month after month, year after year, is affected by air contaminants even though an acute episode, such as that which gripped Donora, may never occur."

Ewing said the year-long investigation of the Donora smog took the full time of 25 Public Health Service experts.

This report reveals for the first time that in addition to 20 deaths, the illness of 5910 persons—43 percent of the population—was caused by the smog over Donora and the nearby community of Webster beginning October 27, 1948.

About one fifth of the people affected were seriously ill, many of them for as long as two weeks after the smog lifted."

Most of Donora's wage earners work in a big steel and wire plant and a zinc plant in the town.

The Health Service estimated that the zinc plant, steel plant, wire mill and steam-generating equipment discharge into Donora's atmosphere daily more than 112,000 pounds of particle matter—including sulphur compounds, zinc, lead, iron and cadmium—as well as gases, including 760,800 pounds of carbon monoxide.

In addition, it said, Donora's air is polluted by home and office furnaces and other domestic consumption; trains and automobiles.

The report said it was unlikely any one substance caused the ailments, but that a number of chemicals acting in combination or simultaneously might have done so.

The study showed 38 dogs—15 percent of the number in town—became ill, and 10 died. Twelve coughing, sneezing cats also became ill and three died. Other victims included pet canaries and rabbits.

Farmers reported the loss of 250 chickens from infectious respiratory diseases.

Britain's Big Fear of America: Nothing Fails Like Success

By J. A. Livingston

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, Oct. 13.—On the train, in the clubs, on tramways, at tea counters—yes, anywhere—whenever an Englishman gets to talking about business in America he soon begins asking about motor cars. Why is it that British cars can't make a dent in your market? Is it because everyone in America has to have a large car?

You detect the underlying hope and misgiving in the questions. The Britisher somehow feels defeated. He feels that the British automobile industry ought to be able to break into America and earn dollars. And British automobile manufacturers respond unblushingly to the slightest word of encouragement. They feel somehow that they haven't squared themselves with their countrymen so long as they're shut out of America. Didn't the motor industry really start in Britain?

Livingston

But every British manufacturer, and the auto maker particularly, has this one dominant worry about America: Nothing fails like success. Suppose he took a nice healthy bite out of American car sales. Then United States auto manufacturers, labor unions and Congress would gang up with a higher tariff. If not that, some American manufacturer, hungry for volume, would tool up a vast assembly line and undercut him. Englishmen know from long experience and ECA-sponsored plant visitations to the United States, that they're not quite in it with United States manufacturers when it comes to low-cost, big-volume output.

NEVERTHELESS, there may be a niche—a small niche—for a British car in America, if some manufacturer has the capital and the derring-do to make the effort. Particularly since the devaluation of the pound. Consider the case of the Austin. Its small car sells for about $1350 in America, or about $150 or so below the general run of low-priced American cars. But suppose Austin, or some other British manufacturer, decided on an all-out American effort and were to push the price down to about $1200. Then the initial saving of $300 and more might be attractive to many persons who prefer a brand-new car to a fairly new second-hand one.

But price isn't victory. A British company would have to service its vehicles. That means sales agencies and garages in most cities of 50,000 population and higher, certainly 100,000. And it means establishing central points for spare parts in large cities like New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, New Orleans, Dallas, San Francisco, and so on. When it comes to auto repairs, Americans are an impatient lot—as the long list of failed-car companies attests.

IN CONTRAST with a U. S. company, success would come at a fairly low level of sales to a British manufacturer. The entire British auto industry turns out only 400,000 passenger cars per year. Austin, the biggest, is proud of its recent weekly volume of 3100 cars and trucks per week as against its prewar peak of 2000 cars weekly. Yet that's still only 150,000 cars per year, or about in line with some of America's smaller producers. And if Austin could sell 50,000 cars in the United States, it would be able to step up its own production by one third and get some of the benefits in cost reduction of larger-scale output. Yet Austin would not, with that volume, make American manufacturers squirm.

Chevrolet, Ford and Plymouth, for instance, hardly would undertake to set up a special production line to make a low-priced car if the reward were only 50,000 cars per year. They're in the million-car-a-year class already. To undercut their own principal cars would be suicidal unless they decided that the American market was changing, that the public was going to prefer a smaller, cheaper car.

NOR IS IT LIKELY that an independent company like Nash, or Studebaker, or Hudson, would be prepared to give battle at quotations $400 and more below their current prices. They've faced the same quandry for years: Should they try to turn out a car that would sell for less than Chevvies, Fords and Plymouths? They've never really gone all out for it. The risks of failure have been too great. Studebaker, of course, brought out its Champion, but it was usually just above the big three price range.

That, then, is the British opportunity: To sell to Americans who'd like to save on the initial price or want a small car for its economy and parking advantages. A British company might even be able to get sales up to 100,000 or 200,000 without causing a stir in Congress. But if sales ever get really large—up to 300,000 or 400,000—then it's a safe bet that some U. S. manufacturer would decide that what's big enough for John Bull is big enough for him. He'd tool up, on an American scale, to compete for the business.

Ickes Accuses Sen. Downey Of Perjury

By the United Press

Harold L. Ickes, former Secretary of Interior, yesterday accused Senator Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.) of giving perjured testimony before a Senate committee.

He suggested that the Attorney General take "appropriate action" and expressed doubt that congressional immunity would apply under an indictment "for false testimony under oath."

Ickes hurled the charge in Downey's presence at a Senate Interior Committee hearing. Downey sat relaxed, smoking a cigar, in a chair across the big committee table.

Ridiculous, Says Downey

Downey dismissed Ickes' charge as "ridiculous and fantastic."

The hearing is part of an investigation, asked by Downey, into his charges of inefficiency and "corrupt misrepresentation" on the part of Reclamation Commissioner Michael W. Straus, California Regional Director Richard L. Boke and other reclamation officials.

Downey had testified that Straus exerted "political pressure" against his predecessor, Harry W. Bashore, that forced him to resign.

"That testimony of Sheridan Downey is false," Ickes said. "And, since it was given under oath, perjured."

Ickes appointed Straus and Boke to their reclamation jobs when he was Secretary of Interior.

Referring to a private diary he kept at the time, Ickes testified that Bashore had been anxious to resign and, when he did, he recommended Straus as his successor.

Specific Testimony

The particular testimony by Downey that Ickes said was false was this statement:

"Mr. Bashore sat in a big chair in my room with tears in his eyes, told me that he was a beaten and defeated man, that he loved his job, he thought he could do a great one, but he could no longer endure the political pressure and the manipulation coming from Mr. Straus and his associate, and he ddi resign."

Recalling that Downey dramatically insisted that his own testimony should be taken under oath, Ickes told the committe he thought it was a "ham act" and a "bit of cheap theater."

He described Downey as "a waspish Senator" and accused him of political opportunism.

Ickes said Downey's whole case against Straus and Boke springs from the Senator's desire to nullify the 160-acre limitation on water for reclaimed land in the Central Valley project in California.

"It would seem to me that this conspiracy to wreck, or at least to damage seriously, the reclamation program for the Central Valley has gone far enough," Ickes said.

Woodward's Net Up 44% In Fiscal Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

Woodward & Lothrop yesterday reported net earnings of $1,092,271 for the fiscal year ended July 31, an increase of 44 percent over the $757,050 in the preceding year.

Parker

In the annual report to stockholders mailed last night, President Andrew Parker stated income was equal to $3.99 a common share as compared with $2.51 a share in the previous year.

Sales for the year ended July 31 aggregated $38,799,163, a decrease of $91,977 or 0.2 percent from the previous 12 months. Operating expenses of $36,718,040 were slightly less than the $37,384,184 in 1948.

Commenting on current operations, Parker said that the outlook for the current fiscal year "appears to be relatively stable, both with regard to our sources of supply and consumer purchasing."

During the past spring season, he added, "many necessary price reductions were taken in the primary and manufacturing markets, as well as at retail. There will undoubtedly be further reductions, but it is our opinion that prices generally have reached a level at which, it appears, they will remain for some time to come."

While maintaining a reasonable open-to-buy position in the several departments, we are endeavoring to keep our stocks in as complete assortment as possible."

A's Directors Rebuff Mack, Fire Simmons and Brucker; Laurel Double Pays $3527; One Bettor Wins $17,639

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NO MATTER WHAT they call it—out-of-court settlement or amicable arrangement—organized baseball was subjecting itself to the charge of paying over hush money to Danny Gardella last week when he agreed to drop his $300,000 suit against the baseball business.

It didn't solve anything permanently, though it did deliver Baseball Commissioner Chandler and his club owners from the immediate crisis of going to court and trying to prove that their reserve clause is legal. Danny had 'em reaching for the sky when he was persuaded, finally, to drop that gun.

POVICH

Chandler timed it nicely, smuggling the news into print during the clamor of the World Series when the story had to be subordinated to the Yankee and Dodger doings. There was no announcement of any cash settlement, but what do you think? Exactly.

But organized baseball is still a sitting duck for the next player with the same kind of grievance, at least until a test in the modern courts upholds its reserve clause.

THE GARDELLA CASE was a critical one, unlike the other suits filed and later dropped by Max Lanier and Fred Martin who like Gardella had jumped to Mexico. That latter pair jumped contracts in midseason. Gardella merely violated the reserve clause which binds a player to a club between seasons, and he had been shouting that it was unenforceable, which it probably is.

Yet he was banished from baseball under its laws, exactly as were the others who jumped to Mexico. Chandler's action in outlawing Gardella had the approval of the club owners, so he was not playing a lone, tyrannical hand. But with the trial forestalled only a week before it was due on the New York court docket, Chandler and his attorney must have been in a cold sweat.

They're in a spot now, where they'll have to be careful before suspending ballplayers in the future. They must have a new respect for salary holdouts, especially, and go slow on boycotting them, as was routine in the past. Chandler doubtless will caution the club owners not to get too tough with holdouts until he personally is able to screen the case.

IT'S THE SALARY holdout who poses the greatest threat of another court case. He can claim that he hasn't breached any contract—merely that he has failed to respect the reserve clause whose validity he challenges. That's enough to take baseball into court, and baseball is scared of the courts despite all its graveyard-whistling about the decision it got from the U. S. Supreme Court in 1921.

Twenty-eight years ago, the reserve clause was upheld by Chief Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. But that was 28 years ago, when property rights were always getting a bigger deal in jurisprudence than human rights. The modern courts are more liberal in their thinking, and it is significant that a high New York court refused to toss out Gardella's case. It recommended a trial.

The late Judge Landis, when he was commissioner, always cautioned the clubowners to stay away from the courts. He was slow to suspend and thus precipitate a grievance against the game. And that was in the era before baseball was subjected to the new bogey of interstate commerce.

IN THE SUPREME COURT'S 1921 decision that characterized baseball as exempt from interstate commerce regulations, the old Federal League plaintiffs could not marshal the important kind of evidence that new litigants can present to show that the game is, indeed, interstate commerce on a vast scale.

Baseball's by-products—radio and television—now comprise an important share of its revenues, and there is no disputing the interstate nature of those. Gardella's attorneys had hauled that into the case, too, and baseball was sweating to justify its position.

It behooves the bosses now to go lightly with any recalcitrant players. The era when club owners could get tough and hand out suspensions at their whim, is dead. There are those courts with what could be a malevolent eye on the whole business. The word has probably already gone out: If any player-owner troubles, clear 'em with Chandler.

Four Others Hold Tickets On Largest '49 Payoff

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 13.—It was "D" Day here this cloudy afternoon when Devotedly and Diana Lee, winners of the first and second races respectively, combined to form a winning "12-3" daily double payoff of $3,527.80.

There were but five patrons in the crowd of 8,064 to hold the winning ducats of the largest payoff in the country this year.

One of the fortunate held a winning $10 ticket worth $17,639. The get-rich-quick bettor was paid off in cash and refused to divulge his name.

It was the biggest daily double since 1947 when Hollybon and Last Waltz combined victories to return $7,711.20 for $2 at Dade Park, Owensboro, Ky.

Both Devotedly and Diana Lee registered front-running victories. The first named, owned by W. S. Waters, took the lead at the start of the 6-furlong dash and, under Jockey Dickie Williams, held on to beat Lido Way by a nose. Although the Petee-Wrack gelding had been no worse than third in four previous starts here, he paid $34.80 straight.

Diana Lee's victory was more of an upset. The 3-year-old filly raced as a juvenile, made but four starts prior to today and was never better than seventh. Jockey George Cardoza sent her away winging and she was showing her heels by a length and one-half to Go Lock at the end of the three-quarter-mile dash. Owned by N. S. Scava, the daughter of Sky Raider paid a $49 straight mutuel.

Favorite Wins—at Last

The Pincher, owned by Henry S. Hecht, brought some solace to the "chalk" players when he scampered to an easy victory in the featured Black Servant purse. Held at $3 straight, the Heliopolis colt merely toyed with his opposition to win by four lengths.

Missab, a member of the Mrs. Albert Sabath entry, was second a length before D. A. Rosenbaum's Friendly Frank.

The Pincher was clocked in 1:11 3/5, second-best time of the meeting for six furlongs. Jockey Ira Hanford moved the speedster to the front shortly after the break and was under a tight hold while repelling his rivals. Risk A Whirl was closest in pursuit for the first half mile but gave up the chase at the head of the stretch.

At this juncture Missab moved on the outside to challenge the flying leader but Hanford let out a notch to bound away.

Man Sees Winner—He Sold the Ticket

Laurel, Md., Oct. 13.—Mutuel Ticketseller Gene Carlton is one man who actually saw today's anonymous $17,639 winner.

Said Carlton, "I think he's from Baltimore. He came up and 'wheeled' Devotedly with everything in the second race. And that's unusual for a $10 bettor."

(What Carlton means is that the lucky fellow took Devotedly in the first race, then coupled him with all 12 horses in the race. This cost $120).

The silent winner cashed his ticket while the steplechase was in progress and probably left cursing his ill luck. You see, if Snow Hill had won the second, the guy would have collected $21,678.

Connie Says 2 Coaches 'Did a Fine Job for Us'

Philadelphia, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics today fired Veteran Coaches Al Simmons and Earle Brucker in the first major decision the club ever has made against the wishes of Connie Mack.

The handwriting on the wall seemed pretty plain for all baseball to read: The 86-year-old owner-manager no longer is the absolute boss of the American League club he helped found.

Dismissal of the two coaches, a complete surprise to them and to Philadelphia fans, was announced as having been ordered by the club's board of directors. And in a tight-lipped statement Connie said:

"They (Simmons and Brucker) both are wonderful fellows and I thought they did a fine job for us.

"But the board of directors decided we could do without them and they have the final say in running the ball club."

Three Sons on Board

The directors are Mack's three sons, Earle, Roy and Connie, jr.; Benjamin MacFarland, grandson of the late John Shibe, who founded the club with Connie, and Robert Schroeder, one time Shibe Park hot dog hustler who never has worked for any other organization.

How the directors voted could not be learned.

Connie Mack, jr., said the directors' action was "for the best interests of the club. We decided a change in our coaching setup would prove beneficial to the team. So we made the changes."

Members of the Mack family declined any further comment on the situation.

Earle Mack has been assistant manager to his father for nearly a decade. Connie has said flatly that when (and if) he decides to retire as manager, Earle will succeed him.

"Coaches Not to Blame"

"The coaches aren't to blame for some terrible mistakes that were made this year," Simmons said.

"If I had any idea such a change was going to be made I would deliberately have stayed for the World Series so that I could have made some connections for another job," Simmons said.

Brucker, too, said the dismissal "came as a big surprise." But he made no criticism, telling reporters at San Diego, Calif., "I've enjoyed working with Connie Mack very much and I certainly wish him the best of luck."

There was no announcement of successors.

The A's high command—and that includes Mack—have made no secret of their disappointment over the A's fifth place finish in the past season.

Before the 1949 campaign began, Mack had predicted his team had a good chance to win the American League pennant.

The dismissal of Simmons and Brucker followed by less than a year Mack's signing of Jimmy Dykes as a coach of the club.

Simmons, a onetime star outfielder for the A's, has been a coach since 1943 and has directed the team from his third base coach-

Simmons Says

Mack Needs New Players, Not Coaches

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 13 (AP). Al Simmons, one of two coaches fired by the Philadelphia Athletics today, suggested that manager Connie Mack should get "some new players and a new assistant manager."

"I can't see how Mr. Mack can blame any of us (the coaches) for the team's poor showing this season," said Simmons, who came here for his health at the end of the baseball season.

"Why doesn't he go out and get some new players and get a new assistant manager to replace his son, Earl Mack? The dismissal of Earle Brucker and myself was a terrible mistake."

Simmons said the dismissal "comes as a complete surprise to me."

"When I left Philadelphia, Mr. Mack said he would see me around for spring training in Florida next year," he said. "If I had had any idea such a change was going to be made, I would deliberately have stayed for the World Series so that I could have made some connections for another job."

Seattle, Oct. 13 (AP).—Earle Brucker, fired by the Philadelphia Athletics, will be sounded out by the Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League on whether he would be interested in managing Seattle next year.

Marlene Bauer Gains Texas Golf Semifinals

Fort Worth, Oct. 13 (AP)—Continuing her subpar shooting, 15-year-old Marlene Bauer of Los Angeles brushed aside Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill., 3 and 1 here Thursday to gain the semifinals of the women's Texas Open golf tournament.

Marlene joined Betty Mackinnon of Mount Pleasant, Tex., Beverly Hanson of Indio, Calif., and Mary Lena Faulk cmfwyp shrdlua Ga., in the semifinals.

The little Los Angeles tyke built a 4-up margin through the first 13 holes, but Marjorie sliced the margin by two winning the fourteenth and sixteenth holes.

On 17, however, Marlene's approach shot dropped 5 feet from the pin and after Miss Lindsay missed a long putt, she conceded the hole and match.

Miss MacKinnon, sidelined Smith, 6 and 4; Miss Hanson pulled a minor upset by dumping Patty Berg, 3 and 1, and Miss Paulk stayed even with par in dropping Mrs. H. C. Riedel, Dallas, 3 and 2.

In the semifinal matches, Marlene faces Miss MacKinnon and Miss Faulk plays Miss Hanson.

Hoyas Play NYU Tonight

Rams Lose Their Pants in Fire

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams today were the best undressed team in the National Football League.

A laundry fire burned up all 32 sets of the Rams' golden jerseys and pants.

That stroke of misfortune followed the hospitalization of Head Coach Clark Shaugnessy earlier this week with influenza.

Georgetown Picked to Win By 14 Points

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown, at the moment a superb road team, makes its second local appearance tonight at Griffith Stadium against New York University.

The Hoyas have the unusual experience of going into this one favored, by 14 points to be exact.

They were supposed to lose all of their first three games, but surprised Holy Cross and Wake Forest in their own backyards. At College Park against Maryland, the Hoyas were something less than sensational. Suspicion is that they'll try to make up to the homefolks for that one.

Despite the odds, NYU could be a mighty dangerous opponent when 8:30 p. m. kickoff time rolls around. The Violet fields a veteran team that was tough for Georgetown last year, before losing, 13-6.

Billy Payne, Negro speedster, and Jack Fogarty are tricky runners. Fogarty showed it at the ball park here last year when he sprinted 94 yards. Cocaptain Joe Novotny is a good plunger and

Yanks Introduce Novely Safeguard

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—The New York Yankees moved today to help keep baseball players from banging into the walls at Yankee Stadium in the future.

A strip of crushed red stone, 18 feet wide, will replace the turf next to the stands in the outfield and in front of both dugouts. When a player goes after a long fly or a high foul, he can tell when his feet leave the turf.

Bell, Central Meet Today

Bell Vocational and defending champion Central meet at 3:15 p. m. at Central in today's only Interhigh football game.

It's a warmup for tomorrow's 1 p. m. doubleheader which sends Coolidge against Roosevelt and Anacostia against Eastern on Central's field.

Although Halfback Jimmy Pantos will be on the sidelines resting a sore shoulder, Central is a five-touchdown favorite to win today and go into a tie for first place with McKinley Tech in Interhigh's Group II.

Group I is also in for a shuffling in tomorrow's nightcap when Anacostia and Eastern clash. They are deadlocked for first place.

In one of today's top non-league games, Tech, undefeated in three games, journeys to Hagerstown, Md., High with kickoff at 3:15 p. m.

Two undefeated South Atlantic Conference teams meet head-on at Brooks Stadium at 3:15 with Armstrong Tech and Carver of Baltimore the principals.

Tonight, George Washington's Presidents, atop the Virginia Group 1 standings, invade Fairfax to meet an improved Rebel team. Usually the doormat for the rest of the area teams, Fairfax upset Montgomery Blair, 13-12, in its opener.

Louis Says He Won't Fight for Championship

San Francisco, Oct. 13 (AP).—Joe Louis says "It's the money—definitely not the possibility of a title comeback—that lured him from retirement into an exhibition schedule.

"I do not plan ever to fight for the championship again," a sullen Louis declared yesterday. He seemed irritated that anyone would question the sincerity of his retirement.

Then did he schedule several eastern exhibitions to renew interest in boxing? It has lagged since he retired.

"No." And he added, "there's money in it."

Mrs. Glick, a member of the Woodholme Club, defeated Mrs. Betty Meckley of the Kenwood Club, Washington, in a semifinal match, 5 and 3.

Miss Downey, the State women's champion, defeated her Baltimore Country Clubmate, Mrs. Louise Bell, 2 and 1, in the other semifinal match.

Charles Risks Title Tonight

San Francisco, Oct. 13 (AP).—Ezzard Charles risks his National Boxing Association heavyweight title tomorrow night in a 15-round bout with hard-punching, slow-footed Pat Valentino, local pride.

Charles, who beat Jersey Joe Walcott in the single elimination match designated by Joe Louis to determine his successor, will enter the ring as the odds-on favorite. He was the 1-5 choice today and even money he would stop the San Francisco challenger.

Valentino, the California champion, had an ardent, if small rooting section, however. Among them was Johnny Papke, trainer for one-time top contender, Jimmy Bivins. Charles won three times from Bivins and lost once. Bivins took two decisions over Valentino. Trainer Papke thinks Valentino's powerful body punches gives him an excellent chance to win the title.

It will be Charles' second defense of the N.B.A. recognized title since he defeated Walcott, June 22 last in Chicago. He stopped Gus Lesnevich, August 10 in New York.

Another 'Expert' Picks Irish to Lose

Cal Favored Over Trojans

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—The business of forecasting football games gets tougher and tougher. With an average that already has dipped to .793 on 142 correct guesses and 37 misses, we stumble into the fourth round of pigskin predictions for 1949:

Tulane vs. Notre Dame—Here's the top game of the week, maybe of the year. It has been so long since the Irish were beaten that most Notre Dame players don't know how it feels to lose. They are favored again, by 13 points. It may be foolish, but we have a hunch the Green Wave isn't making the trip for fun. In an upset, Tulane.

Southern California vs. California—the winner here can wrestle UCLA for the Pacific Coast Conference and Rose Bowl honors. Both are unbeaten and Southern Cal was the preseason favorite to wind up with all the marbles. At the moment, however, the Golden Bears appear just a shade better, at least in this corner. In a close one, California.

Rice vs. Southern Methodist—they're up to their old tricks in the Southwest Conference, where form means little or nothing. The unbeaten Mustangs rested last week while recovering from the fright handed them by Missouri and should be ready to roll. Southern Methodist.

Wake Forest vs. North Carolina—Wake Forest has lost three in a row, as many as it dropped all last season. That adds up to easy pickings for the unbeaten Tar Heels. North Carolina.

Cornell vs. Yale—A Cornell defense that yielded four touchdowns to Colgate and two to Harvard will get a real workout here, but the unbeaten Big Red should be able to outscore the Yales. Make it Cornell.

Michigan vs. Northwestern—With the pressure off, the Wolverines should rebound from the Army thing if Chuck Ortman has recovered from his untimely injury. Michigan.

DEAR FOLKS:

With the same thoroughness that he built the Kentucky Derby from a cheap, obscure race into America's No. 1 turf event, Matt Winn planned for the race to be carried on after his passing. Winn always looked upon the City of Louisville as his partner and both prospered from the big day. Thus he left Churchill Downs and The Derby in a trust fund, the "Winn Foundation" with Louisville charities and institutions taking the profits. He wanted the race to be continued just as he set it up. Fortunately he schooled a number of good men in his Derby lore. Thus the race will remain a monument to the Kentucky colonel, which is as it should be.

North End, SPCA Horse Shows Set for Weekend

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

The horse show schedule settles down to normal this weekend with only the S. P. C. A. show, at the Glenwood Race Course, Middleburg, Va., on Saturday and the North End Horse Show at the North End Stables on the East-West hwy., Silver spring, Md., listed for the local exhibitors.

Middleburg's S. P. C. A. show will run its sixth annual exhibition under the rules of the Virginia Horse Show Association, starting at 10 a. m. Saturday with an 11-class program scheduled for hunters, junior mounts, and ponies; in addition, three novelty classes have been inaugurated for the entertainment of the younger set including a potato race, egg and spoon race, and a bareback penny ride. Championships will be pinned in the junior and working hunter divisions.

North End Stables, sponsoring their annual fall show, offers the only opportunity for open jumpers to exhibit this weekend and four classes have been listed for the popular division. Filling out the rest of the 14 class program are five events for juniors (18 years and under) and their mounts and 5 classes for the hunter division.

The Silver Spring exhibition is scheduled to get under way at 10 a. m. with the junior classes occupying the morning schedule and continuing at 1 p. m. with the hunters and jumpers taking over to vie for the championship awards in each division.

Ws All in Vain

2 Huge Rock Caught Off Bowen Pier

By Ralph Murdock

IT APPEARS that Tony Wakeman, his wife, Mary; Leonard R. Viner and his wife, Muriel (nickname "Stormy"), have just about grabbed top honors in the rockfish hall of fame. It was the best reported catch in this area that we can recall, and it included one striper that weighed 32 pounds (not ounces. The second largest which was hooked and landed by Mrs. Viner hit 22 pounds.

Murdock

The two illegal size hefties were only in the boat long enough to be weighed and were promptly dispatched on their merry way. Mrs. Viner said, 'I hated to part with the big monster for it was the largest fish I had ever caught. My arms are still sore and I know I will never forget the experiencee of hauling it in."

Best of all, they did keep 26 that were of legal size. The runt was a mere 10-pounder. The big haul was achieved while still fishing off Point Patience near the mouth of the Patuxent River. Capt. Edgar Bowen was the guide and a good one, too, for he boated the 32-pounder.

THE ANGLERS did not leave Bowen's pier until 10 o'clock and fished for five hours. They were anchored only 150 yards from shore and fished by the light of the moon. It took five dozen soft shell crabs and five hours for the anglers to turn the trick. (But what a trick).

The process used was to attach a whole soft shell crab on a large hook with a long wire leader and no sinker. The line is then slowly fed from the reel and the bait floats with the current. Point Patience, in our opinion is the best place to try for this type of fishing if you are looking for the whoppers.

A TRIO OF fishermen, Antonio DiBello, Cy Cook and his son, Joe, fish every Monday and Tuesday from a rowboat off Chesapeake Beach. They start on May 1 and quit on December 1. On Monday they caught 20 nice rock that weighed from 1½ to 5 pounds with the use of an outboard motor. The next day proved a flop, for the trio went fishless. Son Joe says, "We usually do all right." They must, because they never change their fishing grounds.

IF YOU WOULD like to know how much a rockfish grows this story might give you some idea. On May 28 Capt. Bert Lamb nabbed an undersize rock off Holland Point. Before releasing it he measured and tagged it No. S1472. The length on that date was 9¼ inches. Less than four months later, on September 18, the same fish was again caught. It then measured 12½ inches. It was caught the second time by Charles Adams, 2927 Eastern ave., Baltimore, Md., near Annapolis. Lamb has tagged 67 fish to date.

HERB GOODMAN and Joe Brennan fished off Holland Point and docked with 18 rock that weighed from 1 to 4¾ pounds. A southeaster made the bay too choppy for good trolling. Better luck, next time, fellows.

A SEXTET OF LOCAL anglers furnished proof positive that autumn fishing really pays dividends when they journeyed to Lewes, Del., for some ocean fishing and successfully boated six varieties of fish that totaled 290.

They were Harvey S. Lowe, John Rowe, Whitney Burkhart, W. E. Marshall, Pat O'Flynn and H. J. Holt. Their catch included 186 trout, 2-pound average; 70 blues, 9 Bonito, 3 albacore, that scaled 12 pounds each; 10 black sea bass and 2 big hardheads.

Yanks Buy Jack Jensen

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—The New York Yankees bought two of the brightest stars in the Pacific Coast League today.

Manager Casey Stengel announced the purchase of Jackie Jensen, outfielder, who is a former California football star, and Alfred (Billy) Martin' an infielder. They were bought from the Oakland Club, which Stengel managed last year.

No price was divulged but it's rumored the Yankees shelled out in the neighborhood of $100,000 and five players for the two athletes, who were widely sought after by major league clubs.

They will report for spring training next March.

Jensen, 22, is the former football star at the University of California. He is a bonus player. The Yankees, who must either keep him or let him go via waivers next year because of his "bonus" tag, will undertake the financial obligations.

Jensen batted .261 this season. Included in his 122 hits were 21 doubles, seven triples and nine home runs. He drove in 78 runs.

Martin hit .284 this year.

A's Directors Go Over Mack's Head, Fire Simmons, Brucker

ing box since 1945. Brucker has been in charge of the A's pitchers.

Bucketfoot Al was one of the greatest right handed hitters of all time. He and Dykes were two of the standout players on Mack's great clubs of the late 20's and early 30's.

But in a general housecleaning in 1932, Mack sold Simmons, Dykes and Mule Haas to the Chicago White Sox for $150,000.

Dykes later managed the White Sox.

Only a year ago, Mack was extolling the virtues of Brucker as a deevloper of pitching talent, hailing him for his work with such moundsmen as Phil Marchildon, Dick Fowler, Jess Flores and others.

But the pitching collapsed during the past season. Flores is gone, Marchildon couldn't win a game and bursitis-troubled Fowler was only effective in sports.

When Dykes was secured from Hollywood, Calif., where he managed the Pacific Coast League entry, it was rumored that Mack was grooming him to manage the A's.

But Mack spiked those rumors quickly, announcing that his son, Earle, would succeed him as manager.

Dykes came back to the A's as a coach last season. Jimmy was not mentioned in the coaching shakeup today. And, despite Mack's announced choice of his son to succeed him, there have been rumors that Dykes might be the next manager.

Baseball circles here have heard that Jimmy was offered—and turned down—a chance to manage the Washington Nats next year. Baseball fans believe he would not have passed up that chance without some pretty solid assurance of a firm future with the Athletics.

Connie Mack and the late John Shibe founded the Amer'n League team in 1901, with Connie as the field manager and Shibe handling front office duties.

Shibe died nearly 20 years ago. In 1940 Mack purchased 141 shares of the stock his partner had held and announced the purchase gave him control of the club.

From that time Connie made all major decisions, of policy, as well as managed the club from the dugout. But in recent years he has shifted more and more of the office management to his sons, Roy and Connie, jr., and through the past season confined his interest and activities almost entirely to directing the team on the field.

He has shared a good deal of the field responsibilities with Earle, often leaving the dugout before games were over.

Andy Ranks Fourth in Total Offense

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Andy Davis has accounted for 73 percent of his team's gains this year, the highest percentage of any player in the country.

The GWU sophomore has rolled up 578 yards passing and running, and he is fourth in total offense.

There's still another distinction to Davis' record. His touchdown pass on a 93-yard pass play against Virginia in the longest of the year. Charlie Jones was Andy's receiver on that play.

Because of Andy's good right arm, GW ranks tenth in passing. The Colonials have averaged 170.7 yards through the air for three games. Their total gain is 787 yards.

Andy is twenty-second in passing with 23 completions in 52 attempts for 473 yards and one touchdown.

Trailing Andy in offense percentage are Lindy Berry of Texas Christian with 62 percent, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist with 6-, and Charlie Justice of North Carolina with 56.

Ahead of him in total offense are Drake's Johnny Bright with 976 yards, Berry with 745 and Buddy Lex of William and Mary with 601. All of them have played in four games, one more than Davis.

Navy, Georgetown and Maryland also get recognition in the national statistics.

Middie Bob Zastrow holds seventh place in total offense with 528 yards, and Navy ranks seventh in team passing with an average of 182.3 yards per game.

Tommy Hardiman, Hoyas' defensive quarterback, is sixth in pass interceptions with four for 71 yards. Oregon's Wooley Lewis is first with six interceptions for 85 yards.

G. U. Coach Bob Margarita claims that Hardiman actually has five interceptions, but that the fifth got lost somewhere in the adding machine.

Johnny Idzik of Maryland is sixteenth in punt returns with 10 returns for 122 yards.

Entries Grow In Potomac Sail Events

By Happy Walker

THE SECOND of the six double-header series of sailing races, sponsored by the Potomac River Sailing Association, was far, the largest sailing event this year.

Walker

Aided by perfect weather, the race committee flagged some 45 starters over the line in the first race and 54 starters in the second.

The third event of the series will be held this coming Sunday off Hains Point.

The Marine Trade Association held its first meeting of the fall season last night at the Corinthian Yacht Club. President A. B. Clark presided at the directors' dinner preceding the general meeting.

Heading the agenda was the nomination of officers for the coming year. Named were: Frank P. Greenman, president; Hugh Alexander, vice president; Nathan Wechsler, secretary-treasurer. Nominated to the board of directors were: Robert Weston, H. Richard Robinson, C. G. Needham, Robert Phelps and W. A. Hughes. Elections will take place in November.

The association received a letter of appreciation from Admiral F. A. Fahrion for their efforts in staging the marine parade, pageant and regatta which climaxed the recent 150th anniversary of the Naval Gun Factory.

Sam Del Vecchio and H. Richard Robinson were hosts for the gathering.

SETTING SOMEWHAT of a precedent, the annual meeting of the Fourth Region, American Power Boat Association, will be shifted from Baltimore to Washington this year. Chairman J. J. Hubbard has set Sunday, October 23, as the date, and the Burlington Hotel as the place.

Officers will be elected for the coming season to handle the administrative affairs of the region which takes in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina.

A number of resolutions dealing with the conduct of A.P.B.A. sanctioned races in this area are expected to be acted on for presentation to the national body. Presiding with Chairman Hubbard will be Clarence Collins, vice chairman; Hudson Moses, secretary and Happy Walker, treasurer.

A major attraction holding the attention of area sailors this weekend is the annual rendezvous of the Cruising Club of America (Chesapeake Bay Section) which opened yesterday.

Hoyas Go Against NYU At Griffith Stadium Tonight

backerup and Quarterbacks Jerry Eisenman and Joe Quinn threaten with their passes.

For receivers they have George Lorentz, tops for NYU in that department last season; Frank Ambrosia and George Starke. Including Payne and Starke, five of the starters are Negroes. The others are Tackle Alan Hopewell and Guards Phil Cox and Dick White.

Yesterday Hoya Coach Bob Margarita said he can't believe these stories about NYU's line being weak. "That's out of character for Hook Mylin," he explained.

Mylin, NYU coach, is famed for fashioning a strong defense. He was coach of the year in 1937 at Lafayette when his team held eight opponents to six points.

His 1940 Lafayette team held four teams scoreless and five to one touchdown each. Still, there never was a coach who could make a tackle or run that ball.

There's a good chance that Georgetown can score early and break the game wide open. One reason is that some good boys have been chafing on the bench.

Quarterback Bob Barry showed his ability in throwing the lone touchdown pass against Maryland and steering the Hoyas to their winning score over Wake Forest. Bob Deacon, soph, rated only slightly behind Starter Frank Mattingly before the season, hasn't played a minute.

Little Babe Baranowski is anxious to show that Billy Conn isn't the only runner on the squad. Others who may get a chance to run the ball are Fullback Lou Miller, Jack Kivus, Johnny Hughes and Lou Surman.

The latter has stepped out of his role as punt specialist. He caught the pass against Maryland and ran well against Wake Forest.

Starting ends will be Bob Noppinger and Bill Resch, who played spectacularly in their last game. So did End Joe Pallotta.

Taking the last six games, Georgetown now holds an 8-4-2 edge over NYU in the series that began in 1928. Chances are the Hoyas will keep that winning streak intact over a team that lost to Bucknell, 14-0, and beat Brooklyn College, 39-13.

Probable line-ups:

D. C. Roller Team Wins

New Jersey Player-Coach Carl Payne furnished the fireworks but "Wild Bill" Reynolds, player-coach of Washington-Baltimore, scored the points for a 15-13 decision in their Roller Derby action last night at Uline Arena before 1537.

Reynolds, with a little more than four minutes to go, lapped three New Jersey players to break a 13-13 deadlock. Payne, with nothing more than mayhem on his mind, drove Wildcat Chuck Davis into the rail with about a minute to go and was tossed out of the game and fined $5. Davis, who landed on the concrete, was not hurt.

Merchants Test Eastern

Eastern A. C., defending champion, clashes with last year's runner-up, Brookland-Woodbridge Merchants, Sunday at 2 p. m. on the Turkey Thicket field. It's one of the top attractions of four Metropolitan Amateur Football League games.

Brookland-Woodbridge, a two-game winner this season, stands a good chance of upsetting the Eastern club which has won the only game played this fall.

Eastern has most of its players back this year and Coach Lawrence Jacobs has strengthened his team in several positions.

Arrow Linen and Southwest Merchants continue their traditional rivalry at Gonzaga; Casbah Restaurant will oppose Great Falls at Magruder Field, Hyattsville, and Langdon Lions play the Riverside Rollers at Taft Playground, in other Metro League games also scheduled for 2 p. m. Sunday.

Major League Player Draft Set Nov. 17

Cincinnati, Oct. 13 (AP).—The major leagues will hold their annual draft for new talent on November 17 in Cincinnati.

The World Champion New York Yankees will get fifteenth choice, and Brooklyn, defeated in the playoff to that club, will bid last.

Players from AAA leagues—the American Association and the International League—cost $10,000 in the draft. Those chosen from circuits of AA classification cost $7500. The price tag diminishes to $1500 for men in Class E.

Wayne Host To Quantico

Quantico, Va., Oct. 13.—Head Coach Hal Harwood and his Quantico Marine football squad fly to Detroit, Mich., today for their clash with the Wayne University Tartars, their first collegiate game since Xavier University snapped their win streak two weeks ago.

The Marines will be meeting stiff opposition when they hit Lou Zarza's eleven, which will be out to avenge their 7-0 defeat of last year by the servicemen.

Scheduled to make a show in the contest for Quantico is Cal Killeen who has a 1.000 record with three passes, one for a touchdown.

Wingman Bob McElroy is tops on Quantico in the pass receiving department and he will probably give the college boys a headache. McElroy has snatched eight passes for 186 yards.

3 More Ruled Ineligible in Southeastern

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 13 (AP).—The ineligibility ax fell on three more Southern Conference football players today and still others may feel its blade.

The latet severances came after Commissioner Berrir Moore warned that play on "B" squads has counted as varsity play since 1946. They brought to seven the total that have been lopped off SEC squads in the last week or so.

The first three to be cught in this ruling were Alabama's Capt. Doug Lockridge, a 212-pound center; Clay Matthews, Georgia Tech starting tackle, and Jocko Norton, Auburn halfback.

Previously four others had been tossed off their squads for already having played the allowed four years of football. They were Ray Bullock, Louisiana State end; co-Capt. Ralph Chancey, Tennessee fullback; Charlie Bradshaw, Kentucky end, and Doug Hamley, Mississippi tackle.

Western Jayvees Whip Wilson by 14-0

Western High defeated Woodrow Wilson, 14-0, yesterday in a junior varsity football game at Western. Don Mills scored the first touchdown when he recovered a blocked kick in Wilson's end zone. Howard Jenkins ran 6 yards in the last quarter for the other touchdown.
